Ok'd By Committee, Light Rate Bill Goes to Council

APPROVAL OF NEW SCHEDULE RECOMMENDED

All Three Members of Utilities Group Agree To Call For Passage of Ordinance.

SOLONS MEET TOMORROW

Porch to Confer With Ward on Possibility of July 1 Effective Date.

Recommended for passage by all three members of council's utilities committee, the long-discussed light rate ordinance, reducing domestic charges, will be presented to council at tomorrow night's session.

This was announced today by Russell D. Porch, chairman of the committee, who said he and the other members of the committee, Fred Miller and Arthur L. Croak, had agreed to urge council's approval of the measure. Miller and Croak confirmed Porch's statement that they favored approval of the measure.

The ordinance to be presented will be the same as the ordinance proposed on March 26 by the Ohio Public Service company, Porch said, with a clause inserted to the effect that all rules and regulations of the Ohio public Utilities commission will govern service to consumers.

The committee had already been told by City Solicitor Marion D. Ward, however, that passage of a rate ordinance would have no effect on the rate structure.

"The committee has considered the O. P. S. proposition for a considerable length of time and has gone into all angles of the proposal," Porch said. "The committee now feels that it should be brought before council, since it will result in a saving for a majority of Mansfield consumers."

In submitting the proposed rate change on March 26, the Ohio Public Service company estimated that Mansfield consumers would save about $70,000 a year. Since the contract is for five years, the total saving would be about $350,000.

The company had proposed passage by council in time for the new rates to become effective July 1, explaining that the new rate would still have to be approved by the O. P. S. board of directors after passage by council.

Since state law requires that 30 days elapse after approval

More Showers Aid Crop Prospects In Richland County

Week-end showers which gave the Mansfield area a good wetting and some sections of the state more than an inch of moisture brightened crop prospects and helped to replenish water supplies.

More showers were forecast for tonight and Tuesday to help make up the six-inch rainfall deficit for the first five months of the year.

Heaviest rainfall Saturday and Sunday was in southern Ohio which has been harder hit by the spring drought than the northern half of the state. Cincinnati, Dayton, and Chillicothe had more than an inch of rain.

The showers brought a drop in temperature to 59 degrees early today from a high of 79 Sunday. Overcast skies today held the reading to 74 degrees here at noon.

Rainfall in Mansfield was not heavy enough to be of much help to wells and cisterns which are drying up as the result of the prolonged water shortage.

Ohio College Students Among Volunteer Relief Expedition.

PHILADELPHIA—(AP)— Several Ohio college students are among the 30 young men leaving today to join a volunteer relief expedition to the states of Colima and Jalisco in Mexico where widespread damage was caused by an earthquake last March, the American friends service committee announced.

Another group of 75 will leave June 27 from Oteerbein college in Westerville, O. Their work will include rebuilding of homes and schols.

Report Winant Brings Roosevelt Terms of Peace Offer Delivered to British From Germans By Rudolf Hess

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON

WASHINGTON — (INS) — Some informed Washington observers today believe that John G. Winant, American ambassador to London, has returned to the United States to report personally to President Roosevelt the terms of a German peace offer to Britain.

Speculation revolves on the possibility that a German peace offer was actually delivered to the British by Rudolf Hess, No. 3 Nazi, after his sensational solo flight to Scotland May 10. If Hess did carry an official or unofficial German peace offer, it is pointed out, then Winant would be the logical person to bring news of it, along with the British government's reaction, to President Roosevelt.

Aside from Winant's return, there have been other rumors in Washington of impending peace negotiations. Over the holiday week-end, Sen. Wheeler (D) Mont., leader of the senate non-interventionists, called on the president "to take the people into your confidence and inform them of the German peace terms." Wheeler declined to amplify his appeal but indicated it was based upon some knowledge of a German peace offer.

Winant, who returned by Clipper to New York Friday, rested over the week-end before a scheduled conference with the president at the White House tomorrow. Winant's delay in talking to the president might be construed as indicating his information is relatively unimportant but friends of Mr. Roosevelt argued that this conclusion was inaccurate because the president actually desired rest from official

PRIORITIES BILL SIGNED BY FDR TO SPEED AID

President Obtains Power To Speed Production of Arms For Britain.

(By Associated Press)

HYDE PARK, N. Y.—President Roosevelt obtained today power to speed the production of arms for Great Britain and the United States by imposing on American industry mandatory priorities of wartime scope.

Mr. Roosevelt has signed a bill under which mandatory priorities may be assigned to an order or contract of any foreign government brought within the terms of the lease-lend act, and in some cases, to orders of any government department or of private industry.

Heretofore, only contracts placed by the army and navy could be given mandatory priorities by the office of production management—the agency to which Mr. Roosevelt has delegated his authority over priorities.

Again to bolster the armament program, the chief executive has signed a bill to keep iron ore feeding into steel plants. It would permit Canadian vessels to carry ore between American ports on the Great Lakes during the 1941 transportation season.

The bill suspends for a year a law reserving coastwise trade to American ships. There are not enough American bottoms to carry all the ore to meet demands surpassing all previous records. Eighty-five per cent of the iron ore comes from the Lake Superior region, so Canadian ships will be employed as they were in the World war, to haul the ore between lake ports.

The bill just become law allowed the extension of mandatory priorities to contracts made by Eng-

PRAYS FOR AID

Former Warren Pastor Heard at English Memorial Rites.

BROOKWOOD, Surrey, England — (AP) — Speaking at Memorial services for the American dead in the first World war, the Rev. Marcus A. Spencer, formerly of Warren, O., and present pastor of St. John's Presbyterian church in London, prayed for United States armed aid to Britain.

"We pray thee that as America has been led by thee to aid without stint from afar, she may now hold back no longer," he said.

"May she take that further step of complete brotherhood of arms, risk and sacrifice."

Mrs. Winston Churchill laid a wreath in tribute to the American soldiers killed in battle.

THREATEN TO SNAG PROJECTS

Damage Claims on 2 Railroad Crossing Eliminations Here Taken To Court.

With disputes over a right-of-way threatening to delay the start of work on grade elimination projects at the Baltimore and Ohio and Erie railroads west of the city, State Highway Director Hal G. Sours today asked that a jury in Richland county common pleas court determine the amount the state must pay five property owners for their land.

The five claims must be settled now before construction work on the grade elimination jobs can be started, Sours stated in his request for jury trial of the cases. The other claims can be settled later, he said.

Thirty-eight property owners and their representatives are seeking a total of $84,960 in damages to their land in providing a right-of-way for the grade projects on U. S. route 30-N, the highway director pointed out in his petitions.

The claims for damages involve 46 parcels of land in the vicinity of the B. and O. project

Sir Hugh Walpole Succumbs In England at Age of 57.

LONDON—(AP)—Sir Hugh Walpole, author of a novel a year since he was 25, is dead at 57.

He died of a heart attack early yesterday after a week of illness. An obituary notice said there would be "no mourning, by his request."

Up to his last illness Sir Hugh kept himself at the writing which he said came as naturally as breathing.

His recent work consisted mostly of contributions to a London newspaper book review section. Sir Hugh's best-known works were the widely-read "Jeremy" books and the "Herries" saga. He was known in the United States, too, for his frequent lectures and visits.

WOMAN SETTLES CIRCUS DISPUTE

Nation's Only Female Boss of Tent Shows Averts Strike of Band Musicians.

The only woman circus boss in the nation made sure that the show would go in Mansfield today by averting a threatened strike involving musicians in the band.

Pauline Russell, executive manager of the Russell Bros., circus showing at the Richland county fairgrounds this afternoon and tonight, said an agreement had been reached with officials of the Musicians union whereby members of the band receive a pay increase.

The dispute, she charged, was started Saturday at Elyria, when a union organizer, who had been following the show for several weeks, threatened to halt the show and ordered musicians off the job.

Settlement was reached Sunday after a conference with union officials.

The circus chief said under a temporary agremeent, band members will receive a $3 a week pay boost. They had been receiving

Stores to Start Closing at 6 P. M. Here on Saturdays

Mansfield stores will open their new summer schedule of closing hours Saturday evening when they close their doors at 6 p. m., V. H. Lodde, secretary of the Retail Merchants association, announced today.

Lodde said that the majority of the city's stores would also close at 5:30 p. m. on week-days. No half-holidays will be observed by merchants taking part in the schedule, Lodde said.

The new schedule is being adopted to allow employes a longer week-end and a shorter work week. Lodde pointed out that the customers would benefit also by allowing a longer week-day shopping schedule.

The association will run a series of advertisements this week announcing the stores taking part in the new schedule. In former years, city stores remained open on Saturday nights but cut hours by half-holidays.

3-DAY HOLIDAY BRINGS DEATH TO 500 IN U. S.

County Free of Fatal Mishaps, While Ohio Contributes 38 To Nation's Toll.

Mansfield and Richland county emerged from the three-day Memorial Day holiday unscathed, while at least 38 persons met violent death in Ohio and approximately 500 throughout the nation.

From late Thursday night, reports of Mansfield police, Richland county authorities and state highway patrolmen showed nothing more than minor auto collisions.

Although this district escaped a fatal accident, Ohio contributed more than its share of the nation's deaths in accidents that ranged from the electrocution of a woman by an electric shock from a carpet sweeper to an unsuccessful parachute jumper.

The nearest fatal accident occurred near Bucyrus where Robert Lampman, 22, of Dayton, died as the result of chest and internal injuries received in an auto crash near Nevada. Lampman's car collided with another driven by William Wallace, Washington, D. C., near the Wyandot-Crawford county line.

Mrs. Pauline Wallace, 39, is in a serious condition at the Bucyrus City hospital with a broken right arm and knee. Miss Ruth Kennedy, 22, Lima, who was riding with Lampman, suffered a fractured left shoulder and lacerations about the face.

California led all states by recording a death toll of 67, with 40 listed as highway fatalities. New York was second with a total of 42 and Michigan third with 39.

HOLDS SECRET

Blackened Ruins Searched For Clue to $25,000,000 Fire.

JERSEY CITY, N. J. — (AP) — Blackened rubbled and heat-twisted steelwork held the secret today of the cause of a 24-hour fire that ravaged eight blocks along the Jersey City waterfront, but the police, coast guard and federal bureau of investigation expressed belief that it definitely was not sabotage.

Fire Chief Frank Ertle, who estimated the damage at $25,000,000 told newsmen to "put any sabotage ideas out of your mind," adding that the fire could have started from a carelessly-tossed cigaret.

The fire broke out Saturday afternoon in a stock yard and was not extinguished until after the flames had mushroomed spectacularly through the waterfront area between Sixth street and Pavonia avenue.

Axis Leaders Meet Again at Brenner Pass

Reach Agreement on Course of War as British Concede Mediterranean Becomes 'Axis Sea' With Fall Of Crete; 15,000 Escape.

BULLETIN

ROME—(AP)—Fascist sources today said the five-hour conference between Premier Mussolini and Adolf Hitler presumably concerned plans for countering any belligerent move by the United States.

BULLETIN

ROME—(UP)—Virginio Gayda, Italian editor and commentator, said today the Axis victory in Crete would be followed up soon with a new Italo-German thrust which a special Italian communique hinted might be directed at the besieged British at Tobruk.

(By Associated Press)

Adolf Hitler and Premier Mussolini reached a new "complete agreement" on the course of the war today in another meeting at Brenner Pass, scene of so many fateful decisions in the 21-months-old European war.

At the same time the British acknowledged that the Mediterranean had become virtually an "Axis sea."

This situation and how to capitalize on it undoubtedly figured in the Hitler-Mussolini talks.

Qualified informants in London said the past week's developments—notably the fall of Crete and the alignment of France with the Axis—had practically eliminated the Mediterranean as a link between Britain and the Middle East.

Even fast warships, it was said, were likely to find transit of the 1,900-mile sea a feat of extreme peril, with two dangerous bottlenecks in the middle.

Surface vessels in the two danger zones—the 200-mile stretch between Nazi-conquered Crete and the Axis-held Libya, and the 100-mile gap between Sicily and French-ruled Tunisia—were described as vulnerable to attacks from Axis bombers.

Thus, the inland waterway once fondly termed "Mare Rostrum—our sea" by the Italians, now is shared with the Germans instead of the British.

Hitler and Mussolini conferred for several hours at Brenner Pass, marking the sixth time they have met since the war began. Each meeting has signalled the beginning or end of a major phase in the conflict.

The Axis leaders' last conference, Jan. 20, preceded the Nazi assault on Yugoslavia and Greece.

Germany's Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop and Italy's Count Galeazzo Ciano attended the Brenner meeting, in which it was officially announced that the Fuehrer and Il Duce reach "complete agreement" on points of view.

Meanwhile, Fascist editor Virginio Gayda asserted that Britain lost 45,000 troops, killed or captured, in Crete—a claim far

SURVIVORS TELL CRETE HORRORS

Grim Description of Escape and Island Fighting Told By Evacuees.

By KENNETH ANDERSON

(INS Special Correspondent)

A MIDDLE EAST PORT — While cheering friends and skirling bagpipes gave them a tumultuous welcome, British troops evacuated from Crete told grim stories today of the fall of the Mediterranean island after 12 days of probably the fiercest fighting this or any war has witnessed.

Weary, travel-stained and bearded—but still in good spirits—the troops reached this port after being evacuated successfully under incessant dive-bombing attacks from Nazi Stukas.

A New Zealand veteran related:

"The sky was a whirring mass of planes, bombing and machine-gunning, as we marched wearily 30 miles over the mountains to our points of embarkation.

"The weather was atrocious—rain, snow and hail. Also, the wounded slowed us up."

One party of 60 Anzacs swam

CAMP CLAIBORNE, La.—(U.P.) —After dust and drouth for the last seven weeks at Camp Shelby, Miss., the 37th army division (Ohio) was forced to anchor down today in the Bayou country of Louisiana.

The 18,500 Buckeye soldiers received a damp greeting as they arrived for large-scale military maneuvers during the month of June.

A cloudburst drenched the first moving column of trucks and other vehicles at Alexandria, La., and the maneuver area near here was described by one soldier as "nothing but a big swamp."

Service Determines Value To Society, Senior Class Told

"Man's value to society is determined by the service he renders society," Rev. Herbert S. Garnes, pastor of St. Luke's Lutheran church, said at the baccalaureate services of the Mansfield Senior high school at the First Lutheran church last night before approximately 1,300 persons.

Rev. Garnes pointed out that there are many things which are desirable of themselves but which are not assurances of a man's value to society.

"The possession of wealth is not an assurance of a man's value, nor is position, nor fine social connections, nor ability nor education," he said.

All of these things are important, he said, but they require a higher ideal for the perfect functioning of the well meaning individual.

"Willingness, and not compulsion is the driving force in the lives of worthwhile people," Rev. Garnes continued.

"We must all walk the first mile of compulsion which we find in teachers, parental authority, civil and moral laws. Nobody is ever free to do just exactly what he pleases.

"But if life is to be worthwhile, you must walk the second mile of willingness and make a contribution of service that will be perpetual in its blessing.

"Look about you and you will see that the progress of the world has not been through the possession of wealth, or position, or intellectual power, but

Wheat Quotas Win Despite Opposing Vote In Richland

Although Richland county and Ohio farmers voted heavily against government wheat marketing quotas in a special election Saturday, the quotas received an 80 per cent majority throughout the nation, unofficial tabulations showed today.

Despite the unfavorable vote in Ohio, the marketing restrictions will go into effect here as in the other wheat producing areas on July 1, County AAA Chairman Guy L. Taylor said. The quotas needed only a two-thirds national vote to carry.

The Richland county vote was 145 for the quotas and 311 against them, a favorable vote of about 40 per cent as compared to 47.8 per cent in the state. There were 22 challenged votes in the county which will not be counted until the AAA committee checks them, Taylor said.

Only 31 of the 88 counties in Ohio voted to adopt the quotas. The wheat-producing states in the west favored them heavily, however, giving them enough margin to more than balance the unfavorable sentiment in the eastern states.

Other northcentral Ohio counties were more favorable to the quotas than Richland county, but

A drunk at the other end of the bar watched this with amazement, scarcely able to believe his eyes. By this time there were four stems (without bowls) standing in front of the drinker.

The drunk couldn't stand it any more, and he motioned for the bartender. "Shay," he whispered, "wossamatta with that guy eatin' the tops of those glasses, is he crazy?"

Inasmuch as a great deal of the zany action involved here is set in an insane asylum, it's almost too much to expect that it should make sense. Surprisingly, it does—which sets it above the average goofy gambol of its type.

Of course it's farce. It would be almost as funny if it hadn't bothered to knit its plot pieces together as tightly as farce permits.

Powell and Loy hit their old happy stride together as the ever-loving couple whose anniversary celebration is spoiled by the arrival of mother-in-law Bates. Her advent leads, by easy stages, to Powell's innocent involvement with an old flame (Patrick) and to a divorce suit by Loy. To forestall the action, Powell pretends insanity, a pretense embarrassingly upheld by examiners who confine him to an institution. His escape and subsequent masquerade as his own spinster sister while eluding the police pile on the laughs.

Miss Bates (remember the snobbish dowager of "Rebecca?") and Carson, the perennial girl-loser with the alert-Romeo complex, are big helps.

"She Knew All the Answers," Screenplay by Harry Segall, Kenneth Earl, Curtis Kenyon from story by Jane Allen. Directed by Richard Wallace. Principals: Joan Bennett, Franchot Tone, John Hubbard, Eve Arden, William Tracy, Pierre Watkin., Almira Sessions, Thurston Hall, Grady Sutton.

If they had known the answer to one question—how to keep the movie from sagging toward the end—the makers would have had a consistently amusing light comedy-romance. It's pretty fair, even so.

Bennett, a chorine, is about to elope with Hubbard, a playboy, when his guardian, Tone, threatens disinheritance. Practical Bennett calls off the deal until she can convince the ogre that she is worthy, undertakes conviction by wheedling herself into his employ as switchboard operator in his Wall Street firm.

The boss, of course, is a bespectacled, humorless young man whose intentions, strictly honorable and business-like, are undermined by (1) the new girl's dumbly fortunate manipulation of the stock market, (2) her expert knowledge of eye exercises through which he may shed his specs, (3) his belated appreciation for her comeliness of face and figger.

The job of humanizing the boss and shelving the playboy is not completed until all parties reach the altar steps, where nature takes its convenient course in rather clever style. Tops in her line: Eve Arden.

Papal Appeal Seen Aimed at America

MEDICAL GROUP TOLD TO GUARD ITS POLICIES

Retiring President Lashes 'Special Interests' That Attack Association.

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND — The American Medical association today was exhorted to defend its policies against "destructive criticism by authors whose mental processes seem to have been influenced by Moscow or Berlin."

Retiring President Nathan B. Van Etten of New York accused certain "special interest" groups of attacking the AMA as "a selfish, reactionary, anti-social, restraining influence, opposing activities of those desiring to practice group medicine."

"The old idle talk about a small group of persons dictating the policy of the American Medical association still goes on," he declared before the AMA house of delegates at the opening of the association's 92nd annual meeting.

He reported three AMA executives had been called a "triumvirate of dictators," and identified the three as Dr. Olin West, treasurer; Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor, and Dr. Will C. Braun, business manager, of the AMA journal.

"I have never heard or seen any of them attempt to originate any policy," he commented.

The association's controversial policy of "free choice of physician" was reported to have stood the test of seven turbulent years.

"Some self-esteemed persons," Dr. Van Etten said, "have admitted that freedom to choose a doctor was quite right for themselves as they carried their arthritis to Philadelphia or Boston, their surgery to outstanding operators and their eyes to the best ophthalmologists.

"Their denial of the value of free choice applies only to other less fortunate people. Mass medicine is wonderful for everybody except themselves. They would prescribe but cannot swallow their own medicine."

It was believed that Brand attempted to make a forced landing. Leo Ives, owner of the farm, said he saw the plane circling low above his fields before it wrecked.

Cleveland School System Initiates Spanish Classes

CLEVELAND—(INS)—Special interest groups in Cleveland schools include a conversational class in Spanish in which 21 children are enrolled for sessions three times a week.

It is the first Spanish class in the Cleveland elementary schools, with boys and girls from the third, fourth and fifth grades getting the Latin-American atmosphere along with their work.

Mexican airs from records accompany the children in their quaint dances. They do art work with a Mexican motif and chant Latin-American folk songs.

The pupils learn Spanish equivalents of common English words. For instance, when they leave the classroom for the day they say to their teacher, Ruth Boroush, "adios la profesora," and for thanks they say "gracias."

ELECT OHIOAN CHURCH HEAD

Scientists Choose Massillon Man as Leader; Convention Takes War Stand.

James Randall Dunn, Ohio native elected new president of the Christian Scientist Mother church in Boston, Mass., today called upon 6,000 church members in their annual meeting to recognize the present world conflict as a "world housecleaning during which individual and national sin, tyranny, greed, self-will, and lust for power are being brought to the surface of the thinking world."

The new president, a native of Massillon, received his schooling in Massillon and San Francisco and worked in government service before joining the ministry. He has done missionary work for the church as well as serving as first reader of the Mother church.

Presiding over the meeting, he heard church directors consecrate themselves to the defense of the democratic governmental system as the best human instrument for preserving the basic rights of mankind to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

The directors allied the worldwide religious system with the defenders of democracy everywhere and maintained that 'democratic forms of government must be maintained."

The church board of lectureship reported that with the exception of continental Europe and interruptions in the British Isles, lectures proceeded despite incredibly difficult conditions. Clerk of the Mother church, Ezra W. Palmer, said over a thousand war relief committees working under the War Relief committee in Boston were shipping material to Boston, New York, Portland, Oregon, and Los Angeles to be forwarded to the war zone.

WAITS TOO LONG TO PULL CORD

Parachutist Dies on First Leap as Witnesses Watch.

CINCINNATI — (INS) — Making his first parachute jump, Ross E. Melvin, 38, waited too long to pull the rip cord and was killed.

Leonard Moore, a parachute instructor, said he had been preparing Melvin for the jump for two months.

Although the victim left the airplane at 2,500 feet, witnesses estimated he was only 50 feet from the ground when he pulled the cord.

Irish Minister Robert Brennen will notify Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles of the Eire government's decision late this afternoon.

DOLLY SISTER, 'JUST BROKEN SHELL', ENDS HER OWN LIFE

(By United Press)

HOLLYWOOD — Jenny Dolly didn't think the physicians and surgeons who saved her life and restored her beauty after an automobile accident eight years ago had done her a favor.

She and her twin sister, Rosie, had been an internationally famous dancing team for 20 years, when the accident happened near Bordeaux, France. Her chauffeur dozed, and her automobile crashed into a tree, while it was going more than 60 miles an hour.

Jenny Dolly's lungs were punctured. Her skull and several ribs were fractured. Her stomach was shoved into her lung chamber. Her face was slashed and bruised.

Nevertheless, physicians saved her. She sold her jewels and plastic surgeons restored her face, with the exception of a slight scar on her left cheek.

"I may look the same, but I am just a broken shell," she said several weeks ago.

She never regained her health. She was morose. She was 48, and her dancing career was done.

That apparently was why, officers said today, she made a noose from a dark red curtain in her apartment last night, climbed on the window sill, put the noose around her neck and stepped off.

Her husband was Bernard Vinissky, a Chicago attorney. It was reported that they had decided to separate, but no steps had been taken toward legal separation or divorce.

She and her sister came to the United States from Hungary when they were children. They made their first stage appearance in 1909, when they were 17 at Keith's Union Square theater in New York.

2ND CONTRACT

Taylor Company Here Given $25,442 Defense Order.

A Mansfield plant was awarded its second national defense contract today to supply cooking equipment to be used in training camps throughout the country.

The war department announced that the Taylor Metal Products company had been awarded a contract for $25,442. The company will supply 23,605 steel-retinned ladles for $8,324 and 34,442 cake skimmers and turners for $17,118.

G. W. Taylor, president of the company, said that announcement would be made soon of a third national defense contract obtained by his company. The equipment, he said, would be used in mobile and camp kitchens.

Two-Way Radio Communication Proves Its Value

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(INS)—A dramatic example of the value of two-way radio communication in the Army Air Corps training program occurred here recently when a sudden gale arose.

One hundred and five flying cadets from the army's basic school, Gunther Field, were in the air at the time the meterological officer reported a dangerous wind appreaching.

Radio instructions brought all the students down, the least experienced landing first.

In some instances radioed orders were given to students who had their landing flaps too high or low for the peculiar situation.

All landed safely.

START PROBE OF $50,000 FIRES

Authorities Seek to Discover If Incendiarists Started Flames.

NORFOLK, Va.—(INS)— An investigation was launched today to determine whether three fires that broke out last night near the naval base were of incendiary origin.

Chief E. J. Cannon said he thought the fires, which caused more than $50,000 damage to the M. T. Blassingham Lumber Co., filling defense orders, the Hurst Wholesale Oil company, and the Dr. Pepper Bottling Works, were of incendiary origin.

All available fire apparatus battled the flames for two hours and called in help from the navy yard and naval operating base.

Laff-a-Day

"Remember now, don't give them any encouragement until we get in front of Lemberg's candy store."

W. T. Houston not only became godfather to a family of rabbits which adopted his garden as a home but he recently assumed the duties of life-guard to keep the family intact. He walked by a little pool at the rear of his home on Park avenue west and spied the head of one little rabbit just above the water of the pool. He rescued the little fellow, which had saved its own life for the moment by anchoring its paws on a small box in the pond. Houston dried the rabbit off, and turned him loose to go about his business in the garden, a sadder and wiser rabbit for the day.

Mansfield firemen are nursing a carrier pigeon injured when struck by a car in the city last week. Patrolman George F. Yoakam brought the pigeon to police headquarters and the firemen took over the task of caring for it until it had recuperated sufficiently to continue its flight. The accident damaged the tail feathers of the bird, preventing it from flying. Although it carried no message, the carrier had a steel band on one leg with the inscription—4248-Au 40-Buffalo. On the other leg was a rubber band numbered C 833.

State Highway Patrolman Jack Hannay, back from a hunting and fishing trip in Canada, was telling friends today not about the fish that got away, but about the bear that got away—from him. Hannay and another hunter watched the same bear trails carefully, but when Bruin came by, Jack was absent. His companion bagged the bear. Hannay did get some fish, however.

Heading the parade of applicants for June marriage licenses in Richland county were Gay Bernell Reger, 116 Reba avenue, and Oneita Mardell Raikes, 141 North Weldon avenue, who visited the license bureau in probate court shortly after the courthouse opened this morning. Three couples applied for licenses inslightly more than an hour, and clerks believe the month will establish a record for the county. There were 67 licenses issued in May, which came close to setting a record for that month.

MORE MEASLES

Rural Districts Report 443 Cases For April.

An unusually high number of measles cases in Richland county outside of the city was shown in the April health report submitted by Dr. R. C. Rehder, city-county health commissioner, to the county board of health Saturday.

Rehder stated that 443 cases were reported in April to bring the total for the year to 457. During May measles cases went much higher, Rehder reported, but have shown signs of abating in the past few weeks. No count has been taken for the month yet.

Also reported for April were 25 births bringing the total for the year to 86 and 18 deaths for a total of 101. The births showed an increase of nine over March and the deaths an increase of three.

Scarlet fever was credited with only six new cases for a total of 27.

Rehder announced that he would give his report for May to the city board of health at a meeting at the Municipal building tonight.

PIUS XII ASKS BETTER LAN DISTRIBUTIO

Speech Interpreted as Hit Over-Regulation of Individ By Totalitarian States

(By United Press)

VATICAN CITY—Pope appeal for "a more favorable tribution of men on the ea surface" was believed by Vatican sources today to have aimed at North and South A ica and Australia.

In the first social and econ discourse of his pontificate, pope, in a world-wide broad Sunday, defended the rights o dividuals and censored governm al regulations tending to un mine those rights. Some sou interpreted this as favorable the Democratic viewpoint.

But he proclaimed the right families to vital spaces, raisin point often mentioned by Axis that overcrowded countr should be permitted to distrib their excess populations to co tries having vast excess land small populations.

"Our planet," he said, "with its extent of oceans, seas lakes, with mountains covered eternal snows and ice, with g deserts and tractless land, is nevertheless, without habitable gions, and vital spaces abando to wild, natural vegetation well suited to be cultivated by to satisfy his needs for civil act ties, and more than once it is evitable that some families grating from one spot or anot should go elsewhere in search new homeland.

"Then, according to the teach of the rerum novarum, the ri of the family to vital space is ognized. When this happens, e gration attains its natural sc as experience often shows; mean a more favorable distribut of men on the earth's surface s able to colonies of agricultu workers, that surface which created and prepared for the of all."

The pope referred to the rer novarum of Pope Leo XIII, issu on May 15, 1891, and he based address on that document, the 5 anniversary of which is being served at the Vatican.

His holiness contended that emigration from crowded to crowded nations would result mutual benefit to both nations.

The pontiff laid down three cial and economic principles which he hoped a new world or would be founded once the prese conflict has ended—a more equ distribution of material goods, inherent rights of workers and integrity and well being of family.

Usually well informed Vatica quarters interpreted the speec as praising the Totalitaria countries for their more equa distribution of goods amon their positions, while at th same time censoring any ten dency to over-regulate individua life.

By contrast, his statement tha nations possessing rich materi wealth did not always provid prosperity for its individuals, wa interpreted in many quarters having referred to the Unite States.

MIXED PRICES RULE DEALINGS ON MART TODAY

Stocks Continue Sluggish In Face of Crete Defeat, Priorities Signing.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Narrowly mixed price changes ruled in today's stock market while dealings continued sluggish.

The British defeat at Crete, brokers said, had been pretty well discounted marketwise but many potential share purchasers inclined to hold aloof pending the next war move.

Signing of the mandatory priorities bill by the president and further price "ceilings" set by defense authorities were thought to have provided additional speculative question marks.

Financial offers scanned the survey of the magazine "Steel" which said that "business as usual, with complete supplying of all peace-time steel needs, apparently now seems impossible, even to the die-hards."

HITLER, DUCE IN ACCORD ON NEXT MOVES IN WAR

Meet at Brenner Pass; British Admit Mediterranean Now 'Axis Sea.'

exceeding unofficial British estimates of only 30,000 Allied soldiers engaged in the defense of the island.

Greek sources in Cairo last week reported 18,000 Germans had been killed in the invasion, including 5,000 drowned under the guns of the British fleet.

While a Berlin announcement merely said broadly that Hitler and Mussolini conferred "about the political situation," speculation arose that they may have discussed:

1. A possible ultimatum to Turkey, demanding passage of Axis troops into the Middle East.
2. A "final" peace offer to Britain, now that Crete has fallen.
3. Plans for a full-scale Axis drive into Egypt to seize the Suez canal.

Other developments in the international picture, facing these swift-breaking events, included a smashing overnight assault by Nazi bombers on the big English industrial city of Manchester, and a reported proclamation of a state of siege in eastern Syria, French-ruled, next door to British-controlled Iraq.

Germany's Luftwaffe, knockout victor in the 12-day battle of Crete, turned its fury anew on the last British and Greek survivors attempting to escape to North Africa in tiny fishing boats.

The British officially conceded defeat yesterday in the struggle for Crete.

Today the London Daily Telegraph bluntly demanded an explanation for Britain's fourth straight setback at the hands of the German war machine — in Norway, Flanders, Greece and Crete.

"Many times in this war has such a story been retold," the newspaper said.

"Why has it been repeated in Crete? We have been on the island since November. What was done in those seven months which failed to prevent another evacuation after a 12-day campaign?"

Anticipating such queries, the London war office declared that British warships and troops "could not be expected to operate indefinitely in and near Crete without more air support than could be provided from our air bases in Africa."

The Germans said Nazi mountain troops defeated the remaining British force on the 160-mile-long island yesterday, taking 3,000 more prisoners. Hitler's high command had previously reported the capture of 10,000 British and Greek soldiers. Altogether, 30,000 imperial troops were said to have been on Crete when the Nazi 'chutists opened the invasion.

British officials said 15,000 troops had been taken off safely and had arrived in Egypt, ready for action in the developing battle for the Suez canal.

In an attack on Manchester, Nazi raiders poured down thousands of fire bombs and high-explosives—the worst assault there in months. Rescue crews, still digging for victims buried under the wreckage this morning, were handicapped by a dense pall of smoke.

An undisclosed number of nurses were feared entombed in the rubble of a nurses' home blasted by a direct high-explosive hit; two hospitals were hit, and four shelters were smashed in a working-class district.

In the Middle East, the British claimed victory in the month-old hostilities with Iraq's regime of Premier Rashid Ali Al Gailani, whose flight from the rich "Garden of Eden" oil kingdom brought a week-end armistice.

The British said the pipe-line flow from Iraq's Mosul oil fields to the British base at Haifa, Palestine, was still cut off, and it was indicated that German forces remained in the country.

There whereabouts of 6-year-old King Feisal II remained uncertain. First reports said he was carried off to neighboring Iran (Persia) by the fleeing Rashid Ali; later it was said he was safe in Baghdad.

With the fall of Crete, the British predicted that Reichsfuehrer Hitler would attempt next to invade Britain's island stronghold of Cyprus in the eastern Mediterranean, 60 miles off the coast of French-ruled Syria.

British military experts also declared Hitler probably would exert heavy new pressure on Turkey—either to join the Axis or to permit the passage of Nazi armored divisions into the Middle East for an attack on Iraq and the Suez canal.

In an apparent attempt to soften the blow of Crete's fall, the London air ministry news service released an account of the RAF's counter-offensive against Germany, declaring:

"The German people are having the war brought home to them in Hamburg, Kiel and Wilhelmshaven.

"There is no concealing the latest damage, and from these centers of devastation rumors run their course throughout Germany. Reports from within Germany describe Hamburg as a tragic picture. There is scarcely any district in the city—the second largest in Germany — which has not suffered."

Survivors of the lost battle for Crete reached Egypt with the declaration that it was not Nazi parachutists that beat them but the clear-cut German control of the air over the island.

"The parachutists were nothing," one soldier declared, "but dive-bombing all day long and continual machine-gun fire were terrible."

A high RAF spokesman declared, however, that German air supremacy which carried the Nazis through the Balkans and to Crete ended at that Mediterranean island because of the air base factor.

Dublin Says Bombs Of German Origin

DUBLIN — (AP) — Four bombs which fell Saturday on neutral Dublin, leaving at least 30 and perhaps 61 dead, "were of German origin," the government of Eire declared today as it instructed its charge d'affaires in Berlin to protest and demand reparations.

The known death toll stood at 30, but 31 other persons were missing and a formal announcement said that "in all probability the final death toll would be 61" since little hope was held that any of the missing would be found alive.

SURVIVORS TELL CRETE HORRORS

Grim Description of Escape and Island Fighting Told By Evacuees

in formation a distance of 3,000 yards from a beach to a destroyer west of Canea. As they swam German Stukas dived low over the water and machine-gunned them.

Fierce fighting was still in progress in the hills of Crete between the British rear guard and the advancing Germans as the ships managed to get out the painfully wounded on Saturday.

All paid tribute to the heroism of the doctors and medical staffs who calmly carried on with their duties despite continuous aerial strafing.

Sometimes there would be as many as 500 German planes in the air at one time—all spewing down a veritable hell of bombs and machine guns on the earth.

One evacuee said he counted 300 bombs during a single two-hour strafing during which the British had to take shelter in caves, in ravines and in gulleys —any place that offered protection from the death-dealing blasts.

All the soldiers told stories of the utter disregard of the Germans for their own losses and even praised the efficiency of the German aerial arrangements. One trooper declared he saw even German howitzers landed by parachute.

Many of the survivors spoke with awe in their voices of one bearded Royal marine, Lance Corporal Neil, who was last seen with two companions near Canea—"fighting it out with the Luftwaffe."

Neil was in command of a Bofers gun and a truck loaded with ammunition.

As the soldiers told it, he was shouting and singing and blazing away with his gun at the swooping planes, calmly bringing down "machine after machine," while the Stukas in flights of five and six attempted to finish off virtually the last British resistance.

A Maori, lying in a hospital, was bitter about it, and said the battle of Crete could have been won by the British in a matter of hours if they had had sufficient aerial support.

But a fierce light shone in his eyes as he told how his unit fought from dusk to dawn, slashing down hundreds of Germans with the bayonet.

"The Germans were terrified by our bayonets," he said. "By day we lay at the mercy of the Sukas. By night we unsheathed our bayonets and cut them to pieces."

After being twice wounded, the Maori, an imperial army sergeant, told how he and a wounded New Zealander began a three-day march from the battle area.

"It was impossible to walk three yards without stepping over dead Germans," he declared.

"Such slaughter must be seen to be believed.

"In the woods, on the mountain sides, corpses lay in clusters. Many swung from the branches of trees, strangled by their parachute cords.

"The battle was utter confusion. Parachutists landed in all directions. The wounded underwent operations under fire and frequently were overtaken by the tide of battle — sometimes even the armless and legless."

Today is circus day in Mansfield. Coming to the city from Elyria yesterday, Russell Brothers circus, one of the three largest in the United States, and the season's first in Mansfield, set up its tented city at the Fairground where it will give performances this afternoon and tonight. The evening performance is scheduled for 8 p. m. with doors to the menagerie opning at 7 p. m. to permit patrons to view the animals. Service Determines Value To Society, Senior Class Told through their use," he said.

Rev. Garnes then cited various examples in literature, art, science, and education to illustrate his point.

Continuing, he said "The life of an institution is dependent upon the service it renders to its fellow men. It is upon this prinicple that the banks, the stores, the churches, and the schools of every community are built.

"Let anyone of these organizations cease this functioning and it will only be a matter of time until the community will hang a crepe upon its door. Herein, then, is the secret of the value of man to society.

"After all, there is but one real service and that is rendered to mankind. And that service to mankind will improve in value and efficiency only in relation to God," Rev. Garnes concluded.

Special music for the impressive ceremony was directed by Florence MacDonald of St. Luke's Lutheran church.

The senior class in graduation robes filed slowly into the church as Mrs. Fred Cahall, organist at St. Luke's, played the prelude, consisting of two parts, "Lento," by MacDonald, and "The Coronation March" from the "Prophet" by Meyerbeer.

Music during the service was provided by St. Luke's choir. The choir sang "Rise Up, O Man of God" by Noble, and "Rejoice In the Lord" by Parker.

WHEAT QUOTAS WIN U. S. VOTE

Crop Limitations To Go In Effect Despite Opposing Stand In County.

none of them gave the quotas a majority. In Ashland county the vote was 222 for and 228 against the quotas. Crawford county farmers voted 218 for and 394 against. The quotas received 191 favorable votes in Holmes county where 138 farmers voted against them.

The vote assured the nation's wheat farmers of government crop loans on wheat at 85 percent of parity price, or from 96 cents to $1 per bushel as compared to 72 cents last year.

After establishing the quotas, the federal government will determine the amount of wheat farmers can sell this summer. The quotas will also allow the government to penalize farmers at the rate of 48 to 50 cents per bushel for growing and selling more grain than their quotas permit.

The quotas will apply only to wheat produced in excess of farmers' quotas. Farmers growing less than 15 acres of wheat or producing fewer than 200 bushels will not be affected by the marketing limitations.

Twelve states reported no accidental deaths.

Six youths were killed in one automobile crash near Kalamazoo, Mich., and six persons were drowned in Morro Bay near San Luis Obispo, Calif., when a mtorboat capsized.

The national safety council expected a final tally to show nearly 400 traffic fatalities.

In accident throughout Ohio, 21 were killed in traffic accidents, eight by drowning and nine others in other mishaps.

Ross E. Melvin, 38, was one of the most spectacular fatalities. Making his initial parachute jump at Cincinnati after two months' instruction, he plunged from 2,500 feet to only 50 from the ground before pulling his rip cord, too late.

Near Ashland Saturday, on U. S. Route 42, Emily Jane Bonham, 62, of Akron, sustained cuts and bruises as a passenger in a car driven by her husband, William A. Bonham, 63, of Akron, when the vehicle skidded into a ditch and struck a telephone pole. She was taken to Samaritan hospital where her condition was reported as "Fair."

Lois Smith, 7, of Hayesville, was struck by a car driven by Raymond Kissell, 28, of Ashland, as she ran between cars in the passing traffic in Hayesville. She sustained cuts and bruises.

Orders of government agencies other than the army and navy and of private industry, when they are of vital importance to defense, also may be assigned mandatory priorities.

In addition, the legislation makes it clear that such priorities may be applied to sub-contracts and sub orders that control may be exercised by the government over products and materials in which shortages appear by reason of the impact of the defense program and that these products and materials may be allocated to defense and to the most important civilian needs.

COLUMBUS — (AP) — Assignment of pastors and selection of a 1942 meeting place conclude the week-long third annual Ohio Methodist conference here today.

Bishop H. Lester Smith of Cincinnati presided at ordination of nine elders and 13 deacons in an impressive ceremony yesterday and Bishop Ernest L. Waldorf of Chicago said in a temperance address that the church must fight for "sane control" of liquor.

REPORT WINANT CARRIES TERMS

Washington Hears Diplomat Home to Tell FDR About Nazi Peace Offer.

cares while in Hyde Park over the week-end.

There are many other matters, beside a peace offer, on which Winant can and undoubtedly will report to the president. One would be the British plans for defending the Mediterranean and the Suez canal after loss of Crete, which the Germans can use as an air base to bomb Alexandria, 350 miles away, and the canal, 450 miles to the southeast.

And Winant undoubtedly will report on British military, shipping and food requirements. One current rumor has it that the British must be given 10 times as much military equipment as has been going overseas if Britain is to successfully resist Germany.

Another current report is that Britain needs food supplies in large quantities. This was indicated by the government order, cancelling issuance of butter to American relief enrollees in order to increase butter shipments to the British.

But greater interest centers on the rumor that Winant has brought back German peace terms. There are some signs pointing to this possibility. Late in April, a Tokio newspaper published a purported German peace proposal, which would strip Britain of all influence in Europe and the Mediterranean while leaving her navy and dominions intact. Only last week, British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden announced British war aims and it is possible he did so to anticipate publication of German peace conditions.

British silence about Hess lends credence to the possibility that the Nazi took peace terms to Scotland.

COUNCIL GETS APPROVED BILL ON LIGHT RATES

Council Committee To Submit Ordinance, Recommends Its Passage.

by a city council of such an ordinance before it becomes effective, it seemed doubtful today whether the new rates could be made effective by July 1. Porch said he planned to confer with Ward in this phase of the matter.

If approved, the new schedule of domestic rates here will be as low as those in effect in any city served by the Ohio Public Service company. Sandusky and Lorain are now on the same schedule as that proposed for Mansfield, and Elyria will have the same rate starting July 1. Elyria council some time ago passed a rate ordinance covering a five-year period.

Savings under the proposed new schedule will range from about 27 cents to about 77 cents a month for consumers of various amounts of domestic power.

Meanwhile, it was learned today that the executive council of the Junior Association of Commerce would meet at 7 p. m. today to decide whether to urge council to approve the new schedule. The meeting, called by Richard Burnham, chairman of the J. A. C board of directors, will be held in the old J. A. C. rooms over the Martin Hardware company.

The trade promotion committee of the J. A. C., headed by Martin Merschdorf, has been gathering data on light rates and will submit its findings at tonight's session.

at the city limits and 19 parcels at the Erie grade elimination west of the city.

Defendants named in the case involving the Erie project are Clarence Epps, Cecil Epps, and E. M. Eby, who, according to the highway department's petition, asked $5,500 for their land, more than the state had set up for their properties. The state must pay all right-of-way claims. Defendants in the B. and O. case are Vrnard D. Coe and Ruth Coe.

The highway department asks the court to impanel a jury to hear the damage cases within 20 days so title to the disputed land can be cleared to permit work to start on the grade projects.

Claims for damages for the B. and O. project right-of-way totaled $58,636. Land owners who filed them were:

Francis L. Brown, Mrs. Francis L. Brown, Clyde Morrow, Mrs. Clyde Morrow, Harry Princehorn as executor and owner, Agnes Princehorn, Harriett Ada Princehorn, Henry P. Princehorn, Marie L. BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Tales From Times Square.

Lillian Hellman was telling producer Herman Shumlin at the Algonquin what she thought would happen when their last year's hit reached the screen.

"You know Hollywood," she said, "they'll want to call it 'The Big Foxes.'"

They were spinning this at Lindy's. Seems that Arthur Mayer, owner of the house of horrors, the Rialto theater, got a 'phone call the other day from a male voice who wanted to know what time the feature went on.

Dorothy Kilgallen

"I've got a brother in the cast," the strange voice explained.

"In that case," Mayer said, "let me leave a pair of tickets for you at the box office."

"Oh, that won't be necessary, thanks," retorted the voice. "I'm a ghost!"

At Claremont Inn some of the boys were discussing a newer name of the Broadway stage.

"Say what you will about his acting," someone observed, "there's always a lot of his fans waiting for him at the stage door."

"Yes," nodded Jean Sablon, "and they're all saying, 'What about that money you owe me'?"

In La Conga, Jimmy Dorsey told the one about the daffy lad who walked into a bar and ordered a martini. After he finished the drink, he proceeded to chew up the bowl of the cocktail glass. Then he ordered another martini, gulped the liquid, bit off the bowl, chewed it up and swallowed the glass. A drunk at the other end of the bar watched this with amazement, scarcely able to believe his eyes. By this time there were four stems (without bowls) standing in front of the drinker.

The drunk couldn't stand it any more, and he motioned for the bartender. "Shay," he whispered, "wossamatta with that guy eatin' the tops of those glasses, is he crazy?"

"Sure," said the bartender, "sure he's crazy. He doesn't know that the tastiest part is the stem!"

At the Ruban Bleu Lucy Monroe, who has sung the national anthem more times than any soprano, was asked how it felt to be known as "the Star-Spangled Banner girl."

"It's very nice," she answered, "except every time I clear my throat, people spring to attention and jump to their feet!"

A well-known actress was being panned at Spivy's Roof.

"She's not very bright," observed singer Betty Bryant.

"And certainly not very well read," added Spivy. "I asked her what she thought of Lindbergh and she said, 'Gee, that was some hop'!"

A big I-am lad was confessing at El Morocco that his girl friend had thrown him over.

"Because," explained the not-too-youngish one, "of my youth."

"Why," queried Honeychile Wilder, "did she find out how you spent it?"

Tommy Tucker says this country should never worry about a shortage of ammunition. We can always throw an old copy of Esquire at 'em.

The other day a pal told Kay Kyser about a famous phony whose wife had left him. "He'll never be able to hold his head up again," said the story teller.

"That's all right," quipped Kyser, who thought the guy deserved it, "it'll improve his golf game."

This actually happened the other night at the Cloop. A female customer asked Ethel Merman what she thought of her companion.

"Swell," replied Ethel politely.

"If you think he's nice," countered the babe, "then you oughta see my husband!"

An unpopular actress jaunted into the Chateau Richelieu and someone commented "There goes the girl who is burning up Broadway."

"Yes," retorted Larry Hart, "person by person!"

Billy Rose relates the story of the girl ghost and the boy ghost who were stalking about in their home-town cemetery.

"You know," said he, "I suddenly have the desire to kiss you."

"Over my dead body!" retorted the girl ghost.

So over her dead body he kissed her!

At the Kretchma the other evening a couple of young gents were giving a pretty damsel the eye.

"Is her dress torn," asked one, "or am I seeing things?"

"It is," shot back the p. d., "and you are!"

Keenan Wynn and Ezra Stone were having dinner together and Wynn, who is a very energetic and enthusiastic young man, was describing an idea he had for a play. He talked and talked while Stone listened and ate his soup.

Finally Ezra said, "Keenan, you'd better eat your soup before your conversation gets cold."

A ham playwright tottered into the Barberry Room for lunch, clutching a bewildered head.

"Migosh," he moaned, "did I have a nightmare!"

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

Inasmuch as a great deal of the zany action involved here is set in an insane asylum, it's almost too much to expect that it should make sense. Surprisingly, it does—which sets it above the average goofy gambol of its type.

Of course it's farce. It would be almost as funny if it hadn't bothered to knit its plot pieces together as tightly as farce permits.

Powell and Loy hit their old happy stride together as the ever-loving couple whose anniversary celebration is spoiled by the arrival of mother-in-law Bates. Her advent leads, by easy stages, to Powell's innocent involvement with an old flame (Patrick) and to a divorce suit by Loy. To forestall the action, Powell pretends insanity, a pretense embarrassingly upheld by examiners who confine him to an institution. His escape and subsequent masquerade as his own spinster sister while eluding the police pile on the laughs.

Miss Bates (remember the snobbish dowager of "Rebecca?") and Carson, the perennial girl-loser with the alert-Romeo complex, are big helps.

"She Knew All the Answers," Screenplay by Harry Segall, Kenneth Earl, Curtis Kenyon from story by Jane Allen. Directed by Richard Wallace. Principals: Joan Bennett, Franchot Tone, John Hubbard, Eve Arden, William Tracy, Pierre Watkin,, Almira Sessions, Thurston Hall, Grady Sutton.

If they had known the answer to one question—how to keep the movie from sagging toward the end—the makers would have had a consistently amusing light comedy-romance. It's pretty fair, even so.

Bennett, a chorine, is about to elope with Hubbard, a playboy, when his guardian, Tone, threatens disinheritance. Practical Bennett calls off the deal until she can convince the ogre that she is worthy, undertakes conviction by wheedling herself into his employ as switchboard operator in his Wall Street firm.

The boss, of course, is a bespectacled, humorless young man whose intentions, strictly honorable and business-like, are undermined by (1) the new girl's dumbly fortunate manipulation of the stock market, (2) her expert knowledge of eye exercises through which he may shed his specs, (3) his belated appreciation for her comeliness of face and figger.

The job of humanizing the boss and shelving the playboy is not completed until all parties reach the altar steps, where nature takes its convenient course in rather clever style. Tops in her line: Eve Arden.

Papal Appeal Seen Aimed at Americas

MEDICAL GROUP TOLD TO GUARD ITS POLICIES

Retiring President Lashes 'Special Interests' That Attack Association.

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND — The American Medical association today was exhorted to defend its policies against "destructive criticism by authors whose mental processes seem to have been influenced by Moscow or Berlin."

Retiring President Nathan B. Van Etten of New York accused certain "special interest" groups of attacking the AMA as "a selfish, reactionary, anti-social, restraining influence, opposing activities of those desiring to practice group medicine."

"The old idle talk about a small group of persons dictating the policy of the American Medical association still goes on," he declared before the AMA house of delegates at the opening of the association's 92nd annual meeting.

He reported three AMA executives had been called a "triumvirate of dictators," and identified the three as Dr. Olin West, treasurer; Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor, and Dr. Will C. Braun, business manager, of the AMA journal.

"I have never heard or seen any of them attempt to originate any policy," he commented.

The association's controversial policy of "free choice of physician" was reported to have stood the test of seven turbulent years.

"Some self-esteemed persons," Dr. Van Etten said, "have admitted that freedom to choose a doctor was quite right for themselves as they carried their arthritis to Philadelphia or Boston, their surgery to outstanding operators and their eyes to the best ophthalmologists.

"Their denial of the value of free choice applies only to other less fortunate people. Mass medicine is wonderful for everybody except themselves. They would prescribe but cannot swallow their own medicine."

PLANE CRASHES

Clevelanders Hurt as Craft Falls, Hits Chicken House.

CLEVELAND—(U.P.)—The second airplane crash within a week in the metropolitan Cleveland area today left two Cleveland men in serious condition at Berea hospital.

William Brand, 22, and William Robinette, 22, were injured when their small monoplane sailed over a farm near Columbia station, Lorain county, and careened into a chicken house. The ship was owned and operated by Brand.

It was believed that Brand attempted to make a forced landing. Leo Ives, owner of the farm, said he saw the plane circling low above his fields before it wrecked.

Cleveland School System Initiates Spanish Classes

CLEVELAND—(INS)—Special interest groups in Cleveland schools include a conversational class in Spanish in which 21 children are enrolled for sessions three times a week.

It is the first Spanish class in the Cleveland elementary schools, with boys and girls from the third, fourth and fifth grades getting the Latin-American atmosphere along with their work.

Mexican airs from records accompany the children in their quaint dances. They do art work with a Mexican motif and chant Latin-American folk songs.

The pupils learn Spanish equivalents of common English words. For instance, when they leave the classroom for the day they say to their teacher, Ruth Boroush, "adios la profesora," and for thanks they say "gracias."

ELECT OHIOAN CHURCH HEAD

Scientists Choose Massillon Man as Leader; Convention Takes War Stand.

James Randall Dunn, Ohio native elected new president of the Christian Scientist Mother church in Boston, Mass., today called upon 6,000 church members in their annual meeting to recognize the present world conflict as a "world housecleaning during which individual and national sin, tyranny, greed, self-will, and lust for power are being brought to the surface or the thinking world."

The new president, a native of Massillon, received his schooling in Massillon and San Francisco and worked in government service before joining the ministry. He has done missionary work for the church as well as serving as first reader of the Mother church.

Presiding over the meeting, he heard church directors consecrate themselves to the defense of the democratic governmental system as the best human instrument for preserving the basic rights of mankind to "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

The directors allied the worldwide religious system with the defenders of democracy everywhere and maintained that 'democratic forms of government must be maintained."

The church board of lectureship reported that with the exception of continental Europe and interruptions in the British Isles, lectures proceeded despite incredibly difficult conditions. Clerk of the Mother church, Ezra W. Palmer, said over a thousand war relief committees working under the War Relief committee in Boston were shipping material to Boston, New York, Portland, Oregon, and Los Angeles to be forwarded to the war zone.

Parachutist Dies on First Leap as Witnesses Watch.

CINCINNATI — (INS) — Making his first parachute jump, Ross E. Melvin, 38, waited too long to pull the rip cord and was killed.

Although the victim left the airplane at 2,500 feet, witnesses estimated he was only 50 feet from the ground when he pulled the cord.

DOLLY SISTER, 'JUST BROKEN SHELL', ENDS HER OWN LIFE

(By United Press)

HOLLYWOOD — Jenny Dolly didn't think the physicians and surgeons who saved her life and restored her beauty after an automobile accident eight years ago had done her a favor.

She and her twin sister, Rosie, had been an internationally famous dancing team for 20 years, when the accident happened near Bordeaux, France. Her chauffeur dozed, and her automobile crashed into a tree, while it was going more than 60 miles an hour.

Jenny Dolly's lungs were punctured. Her skull and several ribs were fractured. Her stomach was shoved into her lung chamber. Her face was slashed and bruised.

Nevertheless, physicians saved her. She sold her jewels and plastic surgeons restored her face, with the exception of a slight scar on her left cheek.

"I may look the same, but I am just a broken shell," she said several weeks ago.

She never regained her health. She was morose. She was 48, and her dancing career was done.

That apparently was why, officers said today, she made a noose from a dark red curtain in her apartment last night, climbed on the window sill, put the noose around her neck and stepped off.

Her husband was Bernard Vinissky, a Chicago attorney. It was reported that they had decided to separate, but no steps had been taken toward legal separation or divorce.

She and her sister came to the United States from Hungary when they were children. They made their first stage appearance in 1909, when they were 17 at Keith's Union Square theater in New York.

2ND CONTRACT

Taylor Company Here Given $25,442 Defense Order.

A Mansfield plant was awarded its second national defense contract today to supply cooking equipment to be used in training camps throughout the country.

The war department announced that the Taylor Metal Products company had been awarded a contract for $25,442. The company will supply 28,605 steel-retinned ladies for $8,324 and 34,442 cake skimmers and turners for $17,118.

G. W. Taylor, president of the company, said that announcement would be made soon of a third national defense contract obtained by his company. The equipment, he said, would be used in mobile and camp kitchens.

Two-Way Radio Communication Proves Its Value

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(INS)—A dramatic example of the value of two-way radio communication in the Army Air Corps training program occurred here recently when a sudden gale arose.

One hundred and five flying cadets from the army's basic school, Gunther Field, were in the air at the time the meterological officer reported a dangerous wind approaching.

Radio instructions brought all the students down, the least experienced landing first.

In some instances radioed orders were given to students who had their landing flaps too high or low for the peculiar situation.

All landed safely.

START PROBE OF $50,000 FIRES

Authorities Seek to Discover If Incendiarists Started Flames.

NORFOLK, Va.—(INS)— An investigation was launched today to determine whether three fires that broke out last night near the naval base were of incendiary origin.

Chief E. J. Cannon said he thought the fires, which caused more than $50,000 damage to the M. T. Blassingham Lumber Co., filling defense orders, the Hurst Wholesale Oil company, and the Dr. Pepper Bottling Works, were of incendiary origin.

All available fire apparatus battled the flames for two hours and called in help from the navy yard and naval operating base.

Laff-a-Day

"Remember now, don't give them any encouragement until we get in front of Loomberg's candy store."

W. T. Houston not only became godfather to a family of rabbits which adopted his garden as a home but he recently assumed the duties of life-guard to keep the family intact. He walked by a little pool at the rear of his home on Park avenue west and spied the head of one little rabbit just above the water of the pool. He rescued the little fellow, which had saved its own life for the moment by anchoring its paws on a small box in the pond. Houston dried the rabbit off, and turned him loose to go about his business in the garden, a sadder and wiser rabbit for the day.

Mansfield firemen are nursing a carrier pigeon injured when struck by a car in the city last week. Patrolman George F. Yoakam brought the pigeon to police headquarters and the firemen took over the task of caring for it until it had recuperated sufficiently to continue its flight. The accident damaged the tail feathers of the bird, preventing it from flying. Although it carried no message, the carrier had a steel band on one leg with the inscription—4248-Au 40-Buffalo. On the other leg was a rubber band numbered C 333.

MORE MEASLES

Rural Districts Report 443 Cases For April.

An unusually high number of measles cases in Richland county outside of the city was shown in the April health report submitted by Dr. R. C. Rehder, city-county health commissioner, to the county board of health Saturday.

Rehder stated that 443 cases were reported in April to bring the total for the year to 457. During May measles cases went much higher, Rehder reported, but have shown signs of abating in the past few weeks. No count has been taken for the month yet.

Also reported for April were 25 births bringing the total for the year to 86 and 18 deaths for a total of 101. The births showed an increase of nine over March and the deaths an increase of three.

Scarlet fever was credited with only six new cases for a total of 27.

Rehder announced that he would give his report for May to the city board of health at a meeting at the Municipal building tonight.

PIUS XII ASKS BETTER LAND DISTRIBUTION

Speech Interpreted as Hitting Over-Regulation of Individual By Totalitarian States.

(By United Press)

VATICAN CITY—Pope Pius' appeal for "a more favorable distribution of men on the earth's surface" was believed by some Vatican sources today to have been aimed at North and South America and Australia.

In the first social and economic discourse of his pontificate, the pope, in a world-wide broadcast Sunday, defended the rights of individuals and censored governmental regulations tending to undermine those rights. Some sources interpreted this as favorable to the Democratic viewpoint.

But he proclaimed the right of families to vital spaces, raising a point often mentioned by the Axis that overcrowded countries should be permitted to distribute their excess populations to countries having vast excess land and small populations.

"Our planet," he said, "with all its extent of oceans, seas and lakes, with mountains covered by eternal snows and ice, with great deserts and tractless land, is not, nevertheless, without habitable regions, and vital spaces abandoned to wild, natural vegetation and well suited to be cultivated by man to satisfy his needs for civil activities, and more than once it is inevitable that some families migrating from one spot or another should go elsewhere in search of a new homeland.

"Then, according to the teaching of the rerum novarum, the right of the family to vital space is recognized. When this happens, emigration attains its natural scope as experience often shows; we mean a more favorable distribution of men on the earth's surface suitable to colonies of agricultural workers, that surface which God created and prepared for the use of all."

The pope referred to the rerum novarum of Pope Leo XIII, issued on May 15, 1891, and he based his address on that document, the 50th anniversary of which is being observed at the Vatican.

His holiness contended that the emigration from crowded to uncrowded nations would result in mutual benefit to both nations.

The pontiff laid down three social and economic principles on which he hoped a new world order would be founded once the present conflict has ended—a more equal distribution of material goods, the inherent rights of workers and the integrity and well being of the family.

Usually well informed Vatican quarters interpreted the speech as praising the Totalitarian countries for their more equal distribution of goods among their positions, while at the same time censoring any tendency to over-regulate individual life.

By contrast, his statement that nations possessing rich material wealth did not always provide prosperity for its individuals, was interpreted in many quarters as having referred to the United States.

Murder Syndicate Member Laughs at Death Sentence

NEW YORK — (INS) — Irving (Knadles) Nitzberg, Bronx gunman convicted of the murder, Inc., killing of Al (Plug) Shuman, was sentenced to death today by County Judge Peter J. Brancato.

As Judge Brancato sentenced the gunman to die in the electric chair at Sing Sing the week of July 13, Nitzberg laughed. Judge Brancato remarked:

"A man who has been sentenced to the chair laughs. That is what he thinks of life unless he is preparing the ground for an insanity plea."

Nitzberg is the fifth member of murder, Inc., to be sentenced to death in the electric chair since Abe (Kid Twist) Reles turned state's evidence against the gang.

HITLER, DUCE IN ACCORD ON NEXT MOVES IN WAR

Meet at Brenner Pass; British Admit Mediterranean Now 'Axis Sea.'

exceeding unofficial British estimates of only 30,000 Allied soldiers engaged in the defense of the island.

Greek sources in Cairo last week reported 18,000 Germans had been killed in the invasion, including 5,000 drowned under the guns of the British fleet.

While a Berlin announcement merely said broadly that Hitler and Mussolini conferred "about the political situation," speculation arose that they may have discussed:

1. A possible ultimatum to Turkey, demanding passage of Axis troops into the Middle East.
2. A "final" peace offer to Britain, now that Crete has fallen.
3. Plans for a full-scale Axis drive into Egypt to seize the Suez canal.

Other developments in the international picture, facing these swift-breaking events, included a smashing overnight assault by Nazi bombers on the big English industrial city of Manchester, and a reported proclamation of a state of siege in eastern Syria, French-ruled, next door to British-controlled Iraq.

Germany's Luftwaffe, knockout victor in the 12-day battle of Crete, turned its fury anew on the last British and Greek survivors attempting to escape to North Africa in tiny fishing boats.

The British officially conceded defeat yesterday in the struggle for Crete.

Today the London Daily Telegraph bluntly demanded an explanation for Britain's fourth straight setback at the hands of the German war machine — in Norway, Flanders, Greece and Crete.

"Many times in this war has such a story been retold," the newspaper said.

"Why has it been repeated in Crete? We have been on the island since November. What was done in those seven months which failed to prevent another evacuation after a 12-day campaign?"

Anticipating such queries, the London war office declared that British warships and troops "could not be expected to operate indefinitely in and near Crete without more air support than could be provided from our air bases in Africa."

The Germans said Nazi mountain troops defeated the remaining British force on the 160-mile-long island yesterday, taking 3,000 more prisoners. Hitler's high command had previously reported the capture of 10,000 British and Greek soldiers. Altogether, 30,000 imperial troops were said to have been on Crete when the Nazi 'chutists opened the invasion.

British officials said 15,000 troops had been taken off safely and had arrived in Egypt, ready for action in the developing battle for the Suez canal.

In an attack on Manchester, Nazi raiders poured down thousands of fire bombs and high-explosives—the worst assault there in months. Rescue crews, still digging for victims buried under the wreckage this morning, were handicapped by a dense pall of smoke.

An undisclosed number of nurses were feared entombed in the rubble of a nurses' home blasted by a direct high-explosive hit; two hospitals were hit, and four shelters were smashed in a working-class district.

In the Middle East, the British claimed victory in the month-old hostilities with Iraq's regime of Premier Rashid Ali Al Gailani, whose flight from the rich "Garden of Eden" oil kingdom brought a week-end armistice.

The British said the pipe-line flow from Iraq's Mosul oil fields to the British base at Haifa, Palestine, was still cut off, and it was indicated that German forces remained in the country.

There whereabouts of 6-year-old King Feisal II remained uncertain. First reports said he was carried off to neighboring Iran (Persia) by the fleeing Rasbid Ali; later it was said he was safe in Baghdad.

With the fall of Crete, the British predicted that Reichsfuehrer Hitler would attempt next to invade Britain's island stronghold of Cyprus in the eastern Mediterranean, 60 miles off the coast of French-ruled Syria.

British military experts also declared Hitler probably would exert heavy new pressure on Turkey—either to join the Axis or to permit the passage of Nazi armored divisions into the Middle East for an attack on Iraq and the Suez canal.

In an apparent attempt to soften the blow of Crete's fall, the London air ministry news service released an account of the RAF's counter-offensive against Germany, declaring:

"The German people are having the war brought home to them in Hamburg, Kiel and Wilhelmshaven.

"There is no concealing the latest damage, and from these centers of devastation rumors run their course throughout Germany. Reports from within Germany describe Hamburg as a tragic picture. There is scarcely any district in the city—the second largest in Germany—which has not suffered."

Survivors of the lost battle for Crete reached Egypt with the declaration that it was not Nazi parachutists that beat them but the clear-cut German control of the air over the island.

"The parachutists were nothing," one soldier declared, "but dive-bombing all day long and continual machine-gun fire were terrible."

A high RAF spokesman declared, however, that German air supremacy which carried the Nazis through the Balkans and to Crete ended at that Mediterranean island because of the air base factor.

Dublin Says Bombs Of German Origin

DUBLIN — (AP) — Four bombs which fell Saturday on neutral Dublin, leaving at least 30 and perhaps 61 dead, "were of German origin," the government of Eire declared today as it instructed its charge d'affaires in Berlin to protest and demand reparations.

The known death toll stood at 30, but 31 other persons were missing and a formal announcement said that "in all probability the final death toll would be 61" since little hope was held that any of the missing would be found alive.

SURVIVORS TELL CRETE HORRORS

Grim Description of Escape and Island Fighting Told By Evacuees.

in formation a distance of 3,000 yards from a beach to a destroyer west of Canea. As they swam German Stukas dived low over the water and machine-gunned them.

Fierce fighting was still in progress in the hills of Crete between the British rear guard and the advancing Germans as the ships managed to get out the painfully wounded on Saturday.

All paid tribute to the heroism of the doctors and medical staffs who calmly carried on with their duties despite continuous aerial strafing.

Sometimes there would be as many as 500 German planes in the air at one time—all spewing down a veritable hell of bombs and machine guns on the earth.

One evacuee said he counted 300 bombs during a single two-hour strafing during which the British had to take shelter in caves, in ravines and in gulleys—any place that offered protection from the death-dealing blasts.

All the soldiers told stories of the utter disregard of the Germans for their own losses and even praised the efficiency of the German aerial arrangements. One trooper declared he saw even German howitzers landed by parachute.

Many of the survivors spoke with awe in their voices of one bearded Royal marine, Lance Corporal Neil, who was last seen with two companions near Canea—"fighting it out with the Luftwaffe."

Neil was in command of a Bofers gun and a truck loaded with ammunition.

As the soldiers told it, he was shouting and singing and blazing away with his gun at the swooping planes, calmly bringing down "machine after machine," while the Stukas in flights of five and six attempted to finish off virtually the last British resistance.

A Maori, lying in a hospital, was bitter about it, and said the battle of Crete could have been won by the British in a matter of hours if they had had sufficient aerial support.

But a fierce light shone in his eyes as he told how his unit fought from dusk to dawn, slashing down hundreds of Germans with the bayonet.

"The Germans were terrified by our bayonets," he said. "By day we lay at the mercy of the Sukas. By night we unsheathed our bayonets and cut them to pieces."

After being twice wounded, the Maori, an imperial army sergeant, told how he and a wounded New Zealander began a three-day march from the battle area.

"It was impossible to walk three yards without stepping over dead Germans," he declared

"Such slaughter must be seen to be believed.

"In the woods, on the mountain sides, corpses lay in clusters. Many swung from the branches of trees, strangled by their parachute cords.

"The battle was utter confusion. Parachutists landed in all directions. The wounded underwent operations under fire and frequently were overtaken by the tide of battle — sometimes even the armless and legless."

Service Determines Value To Society, Senior Class Told

through their use," he said

Rev. Garnes then cited various examples in literature, art, science, and education to illustrate his point.

Continuing, he said "The life of an institution is dependent upon the service it renders to its fellow men. It is upon this principle that the banks, the stores, the churches, and the schools of every community are built.

"Let anyone of these organizations cease this functioning and it will only be a matter of time until the community will hang a crepe upon its door. Herein, then, is the secret of the value of man to society.

"After all, there is but one real service and that is rendered to mankind. And that service to mankind will improve in value and efficiency only in relation to God," Rev. Garnes concluded.

Special music for the impressive ceremony was directed by Florence MacDonald of St. Luke's Lutheran church.

The senior class in graduation robes filed slowly into the church as Mrs. Fred Cahall, organist at St. Luke's, played the prelude, consisting of two parts, "Lento," by MacDonald, and "The Coronation March" from the "Prophet" by Meyerbeer.

Music during the service was provided by St. Luke's choir. The choir sang "Rise Up, O Man of God" by Noble, and "Rejoice In the Lord" by Parker.

none of them gave the quotas a majority. In Ashland county the vote was 222 for and 228 against the quotas. Crawford county farmers voted 218 for and 394 against. The quotas received 191 favorable votes in Holmes county where 138 farmers voted against them.

The vote assured the nation's wheat farmers of government crop loans on wheat at 85 percent of parity price, or from 96 cents to $1 per bushel as compared to 72 cents last year.

After establishing the quotas, the federal government will determine the amount of wheat farmers can sell this summer. The quotas will also allow the government to penalize farmers at the rate of 48 to 50 cents per bushel for growing and selling more grain than their quotas permit.

The quotas will apply only to wheat produced in excess of farmers' quotas. Farmers growing less than 15 acres of wheat or producing fewer than 200 bushels will not be affected by the marketing limitations.

Twelve states reported no accidental deaths.

Six youths were killed in one automobile crash near Kalamazoo, Mich., and six persons were drowned in Morro Bay near San Luis Obispo, Calif., when a mtorboat capsized.

The national safety council expected a final tally to show nearly 400 traffic fatalities.

In accident throughout Ohio, 21 were killed in traffic accidents, eight by drowning and nine others in other mishaps.

Ross E. Melvin, 38, was one of the most spectacular fatalities. Making his initial parachute jump at Cincinnati after two months' instruction, he plunged from 2,500 feet to only 50 from the ground before pulling his rip cord, too late.

Near Ashland Saturday, on U. S. Route 42, Emily Jane Bonham, 62, of Akron, sustained cuts and bruises as a passenger in a car driven by her husband, William A. Bonham, 63, of Akron, when the vehicle skidded into a ditch and struck a telephone pole. She was taken to Samaritan hospital where her condition was reported as "Fair."

Lois Smith, 7, of Hayesville, was struck by a car driven by Raymond Kissell, 28, of Ashland, as she ran between cars in the passing traffic in Hayesville. She sustained cuts and bruises.

REPORT WINANT CARRIES TERMS

Washington Hears Diplomat Home to Tell FDR About Nazi Peace Offer.

cares while in Hyde Park over the week-end.

There are many other matters, beside a peace offer, on which Winant can and undoubtedly will report to the president. One would be the British plans for defending the Mediterranean and the Suez canal after loss of Crete, which the Germans can use as an air base to bomb Alexandria, 350 miles away, and the canal, 450 miles to the southeast.

And Winant undoubtedly will report on British military, shipping and food requirements. One current rumor has it that the British must be given 10 times as much military equipment as has been going overseas if Britain is to successfully resist Germany.

Another current report is that Britain needs food supplies in large quantities. This was indicated by the government order, cancelling issuance of butter to American relief enrollees in order to increase butter shipments to the British.

But greater interest centers on the rumor that Winant has brought back German peace terms. There are some signs pointing to this possibility. Late in April, a Tokio newspaper published a purported German peace proposal, which would strip Britain of all influence in Europe and the Mediterranean while leaving her navy and dominions intact Only last week, British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden announced British war aims and it is possible he did so to anticipate publication of German peace conditions

British silence about Hess lends credence to the possibility that the Nazi took peace terms to Scotland

by a city council of such an ordinance before it becomes effective, it seemed doubtful today whether the new rates could be made effective by July 1. Porch said he planned to confer with Ward in this phase of the matter.

If approved, the new schedule of domestic rates here will be as low as those in effect in any city served by the Ohio Public Service company. Sandusky and Lorain are now on the same schedule as that proposed for Mansfield, and Elyria will have the same rate starting July 1. Elyria council some time ago passed a rate ordinance covering a five-year period.

Savings under the proposed new schedule will range from about 27 cents to about 77 cents a month for consumers of various amounts of domestic power.

Meanwhile, it was learned today that the executive council of the Junior Association of Commerce would meet at 7 p. m. today to decide whether to urge council to approve the new schedule. The meeting, called by Richard Burnham, chairman of the J. A. C. board of directors, will be held in the old J. A. C. rooms over the Martin Hardware company.

The trade promotion committee of the J. A. C., headed by Martin Merschdorf, has been gathering data on light rates and will submit its findings at tonight's session.

National Self-Interest

IF SYMPATHY for the British were all that motivated the actions and attitudes of the American people, war relief work would be all that they would try to do. The other support they have given and urged has been based on instinctive recognition of a fact which the president made very clear in his talk to the Americas on May 27. That is that our own safety is directly involved.

"Our whole program of aid for the democracies," he said, "has been based on hard-headed concern for our own security and for the kind of safe and civilized world in which we wish to live. Every dollar of material we send helps to keep the dictators away from our own hemisphere. Every day that they are held off gives us time to build more guns and tanks and planes and ships.

"We have made no pretense about our own self-interest in this aid. Great Britain understands it—and so does Nazi Germany."

There are Americans who have not understood it before, and seem not to understand it yet. If they are honest, they are woefully ignorant and shortsighted.

Analysis of Sick Nations

THE late Eleutherios Venizelos, Greek statesman, patriot, exile, premier, was born on the Island of Crete. A remark he made during an interview a few years ago with Anne O'Hare McCormick, European correspondent of the New York Times, is recalled in a recent column of hers in connection with the present battle in Crete.

"The one thing you can say for democracy," he said with a smile, "is that it is the only form of government man can bear for any length of time. Unless you in America invent something better, it is the norm of government, and as an old man who has now gone back to Thucydides, I tell you that nations will never be satisfied without it when they come out of the delirium of fever."

Dictatorship, he said, was the symptom of disease in the body politic.

And this he held to be true regardless of how imperfect any given democracy was at any point in its history. Perhaps a disease may be fatal to the body politic as it is to the physical human body. Freedom-loving people in Crete and elsewhere fight today to prevent such death and to restore bearable government.

High Parking Lots

THEY'RE parking cars on the roofs now in New York. It is to be done on a big scale in a new "apartment city" built by the Metropolitan Life Insurance company in the East Bronx. Five-story garages are provided with ramps by which motorists can drive their cars right up to the top. Rates are said to be a little lower up there, and they have the view thrown in.

At the present rate of multiplication of motor cars, it seems likely that a lot of other cities will soon be utilizing roofs in general for the same purpose. There isn't room enough any more on terra firma.

Resolute Faith

LET us believe," urges an eloquent minister in a commencement address, "that beyond the present darkness a new day is dawning which the forces of evil cannot destroy or delay much longer; a day of opportunity for everyone in accordance with his capacity and effort, a day which shall nevermore be darkened by the thunder and the threat of the oppressor, but forever lighted by the principles of the Prince of Peace.'

Yes, let us all believe it. Or to be more realistic, let us try to believe it. Strong faith can move mountains—spiritually, though perhaps not literally. We WILL believe it! At least, on mornings when we've had a good night's sleep.

Increasing Federal Revenue

IT IS REASSURING to learn that revenue is pouring into the United States Treasury now at a rate which indicates an increase of $1,500,000,000 a year in federal collections. Reassuring to the United States Treasury, anyway, and also perhaps to citizens in general who take public debt seriously. We are going to pay and pay and pay for this military preparedness, and we're lucky when we can drop an extra billion or two into Uncle Sam's collection plate, thereby holding down the soaring national debt just that much.

It is a good use to make of excess war profits resulting from the armament boom, even if it does seem to be a process of lifting ourselves by our own boot-straps.

MUSHROOM SEASON

The Strange Case of a Pension

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — Jim Preston who works for Archives and probably carries more facts, historical and contemporary, about Washington than any other man in these parts, and I were chewing the rag.

Somehow we got to discussing the subject of women being drafted for national defense.

"Whether women should be drafted or shouldn't," said Jim, "is somebody else's argument — not mine—but American women have been fighting their men's battles with them ever since there was a country.

"Why, right here in the files and records in this building are scores of stories—not just about women who went a-nursing the sick and wounded — but about women who shouldered a gun and did their share of the shooting, too. They did it in the Civil War and in the Indian wars and in the Revolution—in fact in just about every scrap on American soil.

"Of course every school kid knows about Molly Picher, but I'll bet there are few if any who ever heard of the strange case of Deborah Sampson.

Started In Massachusetts.

"Her story started up in Massachusetts when a fellow named Robert Shurtleff joined one of the Massachusetts regiments in April of 1781. This fellow Shurtleff, it seems, was a good soldier and if the colonists in those days had had time to knock out a lot of medals, he probably would have gotten one. In a way, he did get one—but that's getting ahead of the yarn.

"It was at the battle of Tarrytown that Shurtleff, in there pitching lead as fast as his old muzzle-loader could be stoked and fired, got on the receiving end of a bullet. His pals carried him out of the battle and back to one of those emergency hospitals, probably in some little farmhouse, and then—the army surgeon discovered he wasn't Robert Shurtleff at all, but Deborah Sampson.

"Deborah must have done a little fast talking, because the army surgeon kept her secret. She got well, rejoined the army, was with General Washington when Lord Cornwallis surrendered, and was honorably discharged in November, 1783.

"Now, to get along to the way Deborah was honored. That year or the next, Deborah married a fellow named Benjamin Gannett. And Deborah put in her application for a pension and got it—$48 a year at first and later on, $76 80. She and Benjamin lived together happily for 43 years and then Deborah died.

Took An Act Of Congress.

"And here's how we got the story, Gannett, the widower of a soldier who had been pensioned for years, petitioned Congress—with all the evidence—claiming that he was entitled to the same consideration as the widow of a pensioned soldier and that the pension should be continued.

"It took an act of Congress to do it, but darned if Congress didn't act. Come on out to the files I've got the minutes of Congress right here and all the documents in the case."

And darned if Jim hadn't. There it was, in flowing script, setting forth that since the annals of this country, "furnish no other similar example of female heroism, fidelity and courage" as displayed by Deborah Sampson, her widower, Benjamin Gannett should receive a pension of $80 a year for the rest of his days.

Congress has never granted another "medal" like that.

Listen World!

Rolling Wheels

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

MIGHTY healthy sign, the way our sense of values is changing. Private problems that seemed so vitally important a few months ago are beginning to take second place. We're growing up fast, we Americans—and I've a hunch we needed it!

There's Jim, who hasn't missed the opening day of a trout season for thirty years. Talked about it, planned for weeks in advance. This year he passed it up without a blink.

"Got too many other things to think about," said he, okaying a rush defense order.

There's Helen who used to spend hours primping for bridge, cocktail hours, night spots.: Now she's sorting Bundles for Britain and doesn't give a hoot whether the wave's in her hair or not.

It's hitting other things in our lives, also, this new consciousness of a larger, more pressing world. Those old feuds which we've carried through the years . . . the endless little pin-pricks that got our goat . . . the moods that knocked us out of our stride . . . they are losing their grip on us too.

Somehow when you think of the Greeks, or the Finns, or Dunkirk, you wonder why on earth you've been mad at Milly Jones all these years, just because she once said Junior was a hellion.

Even the griefs and humiliations, we can't hug those as we use to do. The loneliness that has gnawed us like a cancer for years. The grave that swallowed all you knew of hope and laughter. That old betrayal that has festered so long in your blood. Once these took precedence over all other interests. Now they're being blotted out by swift, enormous Change.

And one remembers that other tragic blotting out which marked the trail of the pioneers. The hasty camp by night . . . the sudden death . . . a tiny grave that must not be a marker for the Indian or the wolf. And so the rolling wheels went over, one by one, wiping out the little mound . . . the wheels that must go on no matter what happened.

Pitiful? Yes. But merciful, too. Better, infinitely, that the little grave should be left behind than that a mother should spend her life weeping above it. Dear as love was, there were greater responsibilities to face . . . home to make . . . other babes to cherish . . . a wilderness to conquer. Beside these tremendous challenges one could not nurse a single, broken heart.

Rolling wheels—all progress has been built by them. Always before we can go on to a wider life we must leave something behind—something that belonged to a smaller, personal joy. And always the going on hurts—as all growth hurts. But it's better to be hurt than to stay in our little rut forever, never guessing what adventures lie ahead for those who are strong enough to grasp them.

Rolling wheels, thank God for them! Thank God for the stern and overwhelming pressure that wipes out the narrow boundaries of our lives and gives us a wider perspective, even though we glimpse it through tears.

Roosevelt Plane Control Convoy Already at Work Over Atlantic

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Behind all the guessing and speculation over convoys aroused by the president's fireside chat is this one basic fact. The old-fashioned form of convoy already is out-moded, and, as Roosevelt indicated at last week's press conference, it will not be used. But the new-fashioned form of convoy, as described in detail in this column May 1, already is in use and will be intensified.

This is convoy by airplane patrol, using airplane carriers and nearby islands for bases. The destruction of the Bismarck showed how effective this airplane convoy could be.

Airplanes flying above the water can sight the submarine below the water miles away, whereas a surface vessel cannot sight a submarine more than a mile or so away. Therefore you can expect to see a network of United States airplanes criss-crossing back and forth across the north Atlantic, assisted in part by surface warships, but extending all the way to Ireland.

The Pacific Fleet.

With this settled, the most important strategic problem being discussed in backstage Navy circles is that of bringing the mighty Pacific fleet from the ocean into the Atlantic to prevent Nazi seizure of the mid-Atlantic Islands and to be ready for other major eventualities.

Every detail in connection with such a shift has been discussed. And while there have been some hot behind-the-scenes arguments, the one thing upon which the admirals all agree is that the fleet must be kept together. To split it into small units and send some of them to the Atlantic, in their opinion, would be disastrous. Battleships must have their accompanying cruisers, destroyers, etc., and they cannot be divided.

Naturally, the idea of the fleet withdrawing from the Pacific is enough to raise the hair on the heads of most people on the West Coast. However, the Navy has worked out a plan whereby it is confident that the West Coast would be in no real danger.

This plan is extremely important, because it illustrates the new type of warfare made possible by the long distance bomber. Also it gives the key to Roosevelt's convoy plans. Finally it illustrates what the Nazis could do to the United States if the plan were reversed in the Atlantic.

Key to the plan is Hawaii and the Aleutian islands. The admirals are reasonably confident that long distance patrol planes ranging out from Hawaii in the mid-Pacific and from the Aleutians in the north Pacific would be sufficient to spot any Japanese ship approaching American waters. And air torpedoes of the type which crippled the Bismarck could do the rest. In fact, the entire Bismarck incident has been a striking demonstration that long distance bombers plus island bases have revolutionized warfare in both oceans.

Azores and Canaries.

Now if you transpose the map of the Pacific onto the map of the Atlantic, you will also get an idea of why Roosevelt bore down so heavily on the importance of the Azores, the Canary and Cape Verde islands in his fireside chat. For the Azores are the Hawaii of the mid-Atlantic, while the Canaries and Cape Verdes might be compared to the Aleutians—in reverse position.

Whoever holds these stepping-stones across the Atlantic can sweep that ocean with naval patrol planes and bombers, just as the U. S. fleet can sweep the Pacific from Hawaii and the Aleutians.

If we hold these Atlantic islands, then we hold the gateway to the Atlantic. If Hitler holds them, he controls the first step toward Brazil—and the rest of the way is easy. These were some of the things Roosevelt studied on the large-scale maps of the navy department before he made his broadcast.

Another vital point he studied was not mentioned in his broadcast; because no one is talking publicly about the fact that the British may have to withdraw from Gibraltar, even from the Mediterranean altogether. But in case of such a withdrawal, a glance at the map will show that these three sets of islands—the Azores, Canaries and Cape Verdes—could help to replace Gibraltar.

They sit astride the entrance to the Mediterranean, and long range bombing planes based on those islands could make it hot for any expeditionary force heading out of the Mediterranean for the Americas. All of these are reasons why you can expect vital action regarding the Atlantic islands.

Slugger Lewis.

That half-page newspaper ad sponsored by Southern coal operators bitterly denouncing John L. Lewis and charging him with "dictator" ambitions, had an unadvertised sequel.

It occurred several days after the ad appeared at the meeting of operators and miners called by the Defense Mediation Board in another try at reaching an agreement between the warring groups. The conference took place in the spacious OPM council chamber used by the Board for such powwows.

As usual, Lewis made a solo entry after everybody else was seated. With all eyes on him he roared into action.

Eyes flashing with anger, he told the operators that their ad was a personal insult to him; that since they had descended to dealing in personalities he was prepared to settle their differences on that basis.

"I challenge any of you," Lewis declared, "to step outside and fight it out man to man."

There were no takers.

Lewis sat down and the deliberations got under way.

Capper, himself a successful newspaperman, owner of several papers, is at 75 one of the most active legislators in Washington. . . . Despite the Good Neighbor policy, U. Health And Diet

—By DR. CLENDENING

Those of my readers who have followed my column for any length of time are aware of my interest in multiple human births. I feel that in the case of twins we have a unique opportunity to study organisms biologically because in the case of similar (one-egg) twins, we have individuals starting out with exactly the same heredity and the same biological or life impetus.

My records show, indeed, that in spite of varying environments, twins, over and over again, live the same length of time, even to within hours and minutes of each other, and often die of the same diseases.

I am very much interested, therefore, in the recent book by Dr. H. H. Newman, Professor of Zoology at the University of Chicago, on Multiple Human Births. (Doubleday, Doran & Company, Inc., 1940). Dr. Newman has frequently studied twins but this, so far as I know, is the first time that he has branched out into triplets, quadruplets and a study of the famous quints.

Frequency of Multiple Births.

The frequency of multiple births follows a startling mathematical ratio. Triplets are as much scarcer than twins as twins are scarcer than singletons. In other words, a twin birth occurs for each of 86 single births, and one triplet birth occurs for each of 86 twin births, and one quadruplet birth occurs for each 86 triplet births. Stated otherwise, the ratio of twins to single births is 1 to 86, that of triplets to single births is 1 to 86 2, that of quadruplets to single births is 1 to 86.3. This astonishing ratio has been worked out accurately and is known as Hellin's Law.

Two out of 88, or 1 out of 44 babies born are twins, according to these figures. "Does this mean," asks Professor Newman, "that if you were to attend a football game viewed by 44,000 spectators, that 1,000 of them would be twins?" Well, perhaps not quite that, but we should expect about 600 twins in a crowd of that size.

In four California cities — Berkeley, Oakland, Richmond and Alameda—there was a total school enrollment of 75,013. Of these 1,051 were twins.

Sex Ratios.

In multiple births, the zoologist tries to determine whether the individuals came from one egg, or two or three eggs. One-egg twins, triplets or quadruplets are always of the same sex (a brother and sister twin are never one-egg twins) and they are similar in many other respects.

Now, looking at the sex ratios of quadruplets there were 48 sets of quadruplets born in the United states from 1915 to 1930. There could be five, and only five, sex combinations in a quadruplet set: (1) 4 males, (2) 3 males and 1 female, (3) 2 males and 2 females, (4) 3 females and 1 male, and (5) 4 females. As a matter of fact, in the 48 sets, there were 13 all males and 10 all females, 12 two males and two females. This would indicate that nearly half were one-egg quadruplets and a fourth were two-egg quadruplets. Four sets of quintuplets have been born in the United States since 1776—one in 1776, one in 1800, one in 1896 (Maysfield, Ky.—all boys) and one in 1936 (Durham, N. C.—all girls).

Not as much study has been made of the psychology of triplets and quadruplets as of twins, but in the case of one-egg triplets or quadruplets, the similarity in personality, intellect, bodily build and tendency to disease, is just the same as in twins.

Roadside Tragedy

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

AS I went along the highway, early in the morning, I saw where a wild life tragedy had occurred. At the very edge of the brick, just beside a narrow strip of tender dewy sweet clover, a crow was pecking greedily at a gory carcass. He sank his black, strong beak in deeply and then pulled and twisted on some tasty morsel until the sable feathers of his whole body quivered. He was so absorbed that he made no attempt to fly when I stopped on the berm 30 feet away to observe.

He appeared, at first, to be alone, but something blotted out my view of the victim he was pecking at and occasionally a shadowy movement blurred the line of clover. When my eyes became adjusted, I made out the outline of a pheasant hen, that crept out stealthily from between the clover stalks and worked in modest competition with the crow.

For more than five minutes I watched the feasters. They covered the victim so that I could not determine just what member of the wild folk family had met his fate. The blood that stood in a little pool on the pavement was guarded by the crow and between bites of the mangled flank and shoulder he dipped his beak into the scarlet fluid and drank. The pheasant had no part in this, but only stopped eating to watch.

Then the grass moved above the ditch and the dewy wall of sweet clover parted to show the black, pointed nose and small wide-eyed face of a little smooth haired dog. He stood as still as stone and watched.

The pheasant saw him, she stopped feasting, ruffled her feathers bravely and cast a savage snake-like look upon the cur, then turned and fiercely but very deliberately moved toward him. The dog didn't wait. He retreated down the bank so rapidly that he lost his balance and rolled into the ditch. Smoothing down her modest feathers the hen pheasant began again where she had left off.

A car came along just then and caused the birds to fly. I drove nearer the prostrate form and found it to be a large mother possum. The whole fore part of her body had been crushed—but what I had not seen before — a foot away, four wounded gray furred little ones writhed and shivered mutely.

Even as I turned away, another automobile came by and flattened them upon the pavement.

Let's Look Around

Los Angeles, a City Transformed

—By G. J. KOCHENDERFER

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—There are probably at least a few people in Los Angeles who do not have automobiles, but a drive along Wiltshire boulevard in early evening gives the impression that all the motor vehicles in the country have suddenly concentrated on this particular thoroughfare.

It is somewhat difficult, from the Ohio viewpoint, to understand Los Angeles as being a great city in its own right, and entirely disassociated from the motion picture industry, for which it has become best known in other parts of the country.

Here in Los Angeles the making of motion pictures is considered incidental, rather than as a dominating phase of the city's industrial life, and it is to airplane factories, automobile assembly plants, citrus fruit marketing and diversified manufacturing that residents are most likely to attribute the growth and apparent stability of their city—not forgetting the highly touted tourist appeal of "all-year climate," which is said to guarantee moderate temperature and absence of rain, except when the weather is quite "unusual."

With a present population of more than a million and a half, representing growth of more than a quarter of a million in the past ten years, Los Angeles spreads out over more territory than any other American city and merges inconspicuously into a dozen or more surrounding municipalities.

Looking down, for instance, from a vantage point on Laurel Canyon Drive into the rich San Fernando valley, a dozen separate towns are visioned, all seeming to be a part of one large community with richly productive agricultural surroundings.

EARLY settlers in Los Angeles—those who prospered and became wealthy long before a great city grew up around them, are somewhat inclined to resent the metropolitan encroachment, and many of the fine old homes on West Adams boulevard, the elite district of small city days, are trying rather despairingly to maintain the dignity and charm of a past era while more recently developed suburban sections provide the settings for elaborate new homes.

A STAY of several days in Los Angeles, under capable guidance, is essential to even a casual glimpse of the many places of interest in this city and vicinity, and we are so fortunate as to have for a guide a former Mansfielder, Edward B. Cappeller, who was owner of the Mansfield News until 20 years ago, since which he has lived in Los Angeles.

Our first day's look-around gave a general view of the city and opportunity to become acquainted with carefully observed driving regulations, and also included close-up inspection of the famous Hollywood Bowl, a natural open-air ampitheater, with an enclosure of hills which provide exceptional acoustics for the fine symphony orchestra entertainment given several evenings each week during the summer months. This great "bowl," with its seating capacity of more than 20,000, was started 18 years ago and represents the successful development of an idea of one woman who visioned the possibility of using these hillsides as the background of an ampitheater in which fine music could be made available at popular prices. A sunrise service each Easter morning is a feature which crowds Hollywood Bowl, a natural open-air ampitheater, with an nearby hills.

MORE was seen on this first day, but the space limit has been reached—so that's all, for now.

The Secret of the Marshbanks + + +

By Kathleen Norris

(Copyright, 1941)

CHAPTER IV.

Judge Marshbanks' visitor, twisting a little to look at Cherry, acknowledged the introduction only with a nod and with a level, curious half-smile, and went on talking in a low tone.

"You're not going to this jamboree tonight, Jud?" he said.

"Good heavens, no! But I may pick the girls up there if we play late enough. I'm going to the club. I ought to look in at the Randall party, I suppose. You dressing later?"

"Oh, I don't think I'll go at all! I think I'll go home," the visitor observed. "But, of course, I had to see what our deb looked like tonight. Isn't this the first big affair for her?"

"She was down here a few minutes ago, sure that she was going to look awful and that something was growing on the tip of her nose," the older man said in tolerant amusement. "She's dining at the Rogerses' in Burlingame, going down with Fern, and will come back to the party,"

"Dining?" said Kelly Coates, flinging up his wrist to see the time. "What time do these dublets dine? It's eight now."

"The dinner is supposed to be at eight—seventeen miles away," Judge Marshbanks said. "But they have to kill time until midnight, so they're not worrying! Fran dining down there too, and she'll play bridge until it's time to go to the party."

They talked on of places and personalities unknown to Cherry, and Cherry had a chance, over a foamy soffle of chocolate and creamy stripes, to study the new comer. The judge was tall and lean; Kelly Coates was rather more squarely built, with big, hard, nervous hands, fair hair combed back from his square, fine face, keen eyes and a mouth that Cherry found a certain fascination in watching.

It was not that it was handsome, as the judge's fine clipped mouth and restrained rare smiles were. Kelly's was a wide, hard mouth packed with big, hard, shining teeth, and he used his mouth forcefully, now pressing it firmly closed in denial, now splitting his browned, square face with a great flashing smile, now widening his thinned lips together into an expression of scorn that matched his quickly folded arms and tossed head.

To her he seemed old, but not as old, certainly, as the judge. Thirty, perhaps. She learned from what she could not help over-hearing that he was an artist, that he lived in some place across the bay called Sausalito.

Two women came downstairs. One was a girl of Cherry's age, as fresh as a spray of acacia bloom in a fluffy frock of palest yellow, with spidery yellow orchids pinned at her shoulder. An innocent-eyed girl, with a lovely heart-shaped little face framed in soft curls, a delicately poised little body and discontented blue eyes.

The other woman was dark too, but of an entirely different type. Cherry's first impression was that she was ugly. She was tall and thin, with a long face, deep-set dark eyes, and silky straight black hair that was cut in a deep bang. Her skin was clear and pale, her lips startling in contrast, for her mouth—wide, soft and full—was colored the flame red of a poppy. A tight, black velvet gown outlined her body, the lowcut waist fitted by many seams. Long diamond earrings dangled almost to her shoulders, and at her breast a circle clip of diamonds blazed in the dining room's half light.

"Skunks," she said simply. Her voice, hoarse and deep, thrilled suddenly in the silence. Both men were on their feet as she came languidly to the table. "Of course you both know you're polecats!" she said.

The girl, after having said, "Sam's here, he won't come in," had vanished back in the direction of the hall again. Judson Marshbanks introduced Cherry to his wife, who acknowledged the little ceremony only with an absent glance in Cherry's direction.

"You let me do all the dirty work," said Fran Marshbanks, in a lazily annoyed tone. And again her voice shocked Cherry with its very beauty; it was a rich, low voice that seemed always about to be broken with laughter or tears or both, a shattering, trembling voice that yet clearly indicated its owner's boredom and indifference and pride.

Jud, you are running out on this party," he wife accused him.

"Well, my dear, a debutante party—" he pleaded.

"I know. But you owe it to Amy." But she did not care very much, either way. "As for Mr. Coates," she went on, carelessly reproacful; "he is apparently entirely without soul; he ought to be cultivating rich, homely girls who want their portraits painted, and here is an occasion when he could meet, not one of them, but all of them! Not even dressed!"

"My dress clothers are circa President Harrison, Mrs. Marshbanks," the painter said. "If I painted anyone it would be yourself, and you say you won't sit for me."

"Because I won't go to Sausalito and dress in a transformed barn," Fran answered composedly.

"You've never seen it," he said.

"I know it's like that. Besides, I'm just bringing Amy out in society," the woman went on, "and I have maternal obligations."

"Maternal! You! What is she to you? Sister-in-law?"

"I wish Jud's mother were here to hear you! Family intricacies are meat and drink to her," Fran said. "She's getting back from Florida this week, by the way; you might come in for a cocktail and meet her. She'd be a subject for you! No," she added, reverting to the original topic, "Amy's not my sister-in-law. She's my—work that out, Jud. What's Amy to me?"

"She's my brother's child," he elucidated. "She's my niece, and that makes her your niece by marriage."

"That makes her my niece by marriage," Fran repeated, turning the slow battery of her dark eyes upon Kelly. Cherry saw the look and it made her feel oddly hot and then cold. There was flame in it and challenge in it and provacation, and though the girl could not have given these things names, she knew what they were and what they meant.

"I'll have to come here and paint you at the house," Kelly said in an odd voice after a moment.

"Ah, well, if you could do that!"

"I don't see that we're such criminals, Jud and I," said Kelly, "you've two perfectly good escorts, out there in the hall. I don't dance; I drink very little; I hardly know these people—Why on earth should I go?"

"To be with me," Fran suggested, with an oblique glance at her husband and the hint of an unwilling smile.

"You'll be dancing or playing bridge."

"I'll be bored. I know that. I'd much rather stay at home and read Coventry Patmore. But for one thing," Fran said confidentially to the painter, somewhat lowering her tone as the judge went away to answer a telephone call, "I do it for Amy. After being so much abroad with Jud's mother, spending winters in Palm Springs and New York, she's out of everything. We have to give her some sort of party next month. I want to refresh my mind as to how it's done. It isn't my sort of thing at all!"

"I know it isn't," he said, his keen gaze fixed on her.

"You don't really know me at all," her fine, nervous ivory fingers were busy with the delicate lace of her handkerchief. "You've seen me—three times, is it?"

"Dante saw Beatrice once," he said.

"It's so pleasant," said the woman, "to talk to a man who doesn't think Dante's a hospital and who pronounces Beatrice properly."

"I shall hope as our friendship ripens into real affection," Kelly said with a little inclination of his head, "to please you in more important ways."

"Our friendship is going to ripen? How nice!"

"Don't be too sure it will be nice. It may be—distinctly unpleasant!" he warned her lightly.

She looked at him through half-closed lids at this, in a silence so long that Cherry, fussing with cheese and coffee, could feel her own heart beating quickly.

"You interest me," Fran presently said quietly.

"I can't think at the moment of anything I'd rather do," he answered in the same deliberate, half-serious fashion.

National Self-Interest

IF SYMPATHY for the British were all that motivated the actions and attitudes of the American people, war relief work would be all that they would try to do. The other support they have given and urged has been based on instinctive recognition of a fact which the president made very clear in his talk to the Americas on May 27. That is that our own safety is directly involved.

"Our whole program of aid for the democracies," he said, "has been based on hard-headed concern for our own security and for the kind of safe and civilized world in which we wish to live. Every dollar of material we send helps to keep the dictators away from our own hemisphere. Every day that they are held off gives us time to build more guns and tanks and planes and ships.

"We have made no pretense about our own self-interest in this aid. Great Britain understands it—and so does Nazi Germany."

There are Americans who have not understood it before, and seem not to understand it yet. If they are honest, they are woefully ignorant and shortsighted.

Analysis of Sick Nations

THE late Eleutherios Venizelos, Greek statesman, patriot, exile, premier, was born on the Island of Crete. A remark he made during an interview a few years ago with Anne O'Hare McCormick, European correspondent of the New York Times, is recalled in a recent column of hers in connection with the present battle in Crete.

"The one thing you can say for democracy," he said with a smile, "is that it is the only form of government man can bear for any length of time. Unless you in America invent something better, it is the norm of government, and as an old man who has now gone back to Thucydides, I tell you that nations will never be satisfied without it when they come out of the delirium of fever."

Dictatorship, he said, was the symptom of disease in the body politic.

And this he held to be true regardless of how imperfect any given democracy was at any point in its history. Perhaps a disease may be fatal to the body politic as it is to the physical human body. Freedom-loving people in Crete and elsewhere fight today to prevent such death and to restore bearable government.

High Parking Lots

THEY'RE parking cars on the roofs now in New York. It is to be done on a big scale in a new "apartment city" built by the Metropolitan Life Insurance company in the East Bronx. Five-story garages are provided with ramps by which motorists can drive their cars right up to the top. Rates are said to be a little lower up there, and they have the view thrown in.

At the present rate of multiplication of motor cars, it seems likely that a lot of other cities will soon be utilizing roofs in general for the same purpose. There isn't room enough any more on terra firma.

Resolute Faith

LET us believe," urges an eloquent minister in a commencement address, "that beyond the present darkness a new day is dawning which the forces of evil cannot destroy or delay much longer; a day of opportunity for everyone in accordance with his capacity and effort, a day which shall nevermore be darkened by the thunder and the threat of the oppressor, but forever lighted by the principles of the Prince of Peace.'

Yes, let us all believe it. Or to be more realistic, let us try to believe it. Strong faith can move mountains—spiritually, though perhaps not literally. We WILL believe it! At least, on mornings when we've had a good night's sleep.

Increasing Federal Revenue

IT IS REASSURING to learn that revenue is pouring into the United States Treasury now at a rate which indicates an increase of $1,500,000,000 a year in federal collections. Reassuring to the United States Treasury, anyway, and also perhaps to citizens in general who take public debt seriously. We are going to pay and pay and pay for this military preparedness, and we're lucky when we can drop an extra billion or two into Uncle Sam's collection plate, thereby holding down the soaring national debt just that much.

It is a good use to make of excess war profits resulting from the armament boom, even if it does seem to be a process of lifting ourselves by our own boot-straps.

WASHINGTON — Jim Preston who works for Archives and probably carries more facts, historical and contemporary, about Washington than any other man in these parts, and I were chewing the rag.

Somehow we got to discussing the subject of women being drafted for national defense.

"Whether women should be drafted or shouldn't," said Jim, "is somebody else's argument — not mine—but American women have been fighting their men's battles with them ever since there was a country.

"Why, right here in the files and records in this building are scores of stories—not just about women who went a-nursing the sick and wounded — but about women who shouldered a gun and did their share of the shooting, too. They did it in the Civil War and in the Indian wars and in the Revolution—in fact in just about every scrap on American soil.

"Of course every school kid knows about Molly Picher, but I'll bet there are few if any who ever heard of the strange case of Deborah Sampson.

Started In Massachusetts.

"Her story started up in Massachusetts when a fellow named Robert Shurtleff joined one of the Massachusetts regiments in April of 1781. This fellow Shurtleff, it seems, was a good soldier and if the colonists in those days had had time to knock out a lot of medals, he probably would have gotten one. In a way, he did get one—but that's getting ahead of the yarn.

"It was at the battle of Tarrytown that Shurtleff, in there pitching lead as fast as his old muzzle-loader could be stoked and fired, got on the receiving end of a bullet. His pals carried him out of the battle and back to one of those emergency hospitals, probably in some little farmhouse, and then—the army surgeon discovered he wasn't Robert Shurtleff at all, but Deborah Sampson.

"Deborah must have done a little fast talking, because the army surgeon kept her secret. She got well, rejoined the army, was with General Washington when Lord Cornwallis surrendered, and was honorably discharged in November, 1783.

"Now, to get along to the way Deborah was honored. That year or the next, Deborah married a fellow named Benjamin Gannett. And Deborah put in her application for a pension and got it—$48 a year at first and later on, $76.80. She and Benjamin lived together happily for 43 years and then Deborah died.

Took An Act Of Congress.

"And here's how we got the story, Gannett, the widower of a soldier who had been pensioned for years, petitioned Congress—with all the evidence—claiming that he was entitled to the same consideration as the widow of a pensioned soldier and that the pension should be continued.

"It took an act of Congress to do it, but darned if Congress didn't act. Come on out to the files. I've got the minutes of Congress right here and all the documents in the case."

And darned if Jim hadn't. There it was, in flowing script, setting forth that since the annals of this country, "furnish no other similar example of female heroism, fidelity and courage" as displayed by Deborah Sampson, her widower, Benjamin Gannett should receive a pension of $80 a year for the rest of his days.

Congress has never granted another "medal" like that.

Rolling Wheels

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

MIGHTY healthy sign, the way our sense of values is changing. Private problems that seemed so vitally important a few months ago are beginning to take second place. We're growing up fast, we Americans—and I've a hunch we needed it!

There's Jim, who hasn't missed the opening day of a trout season for thirty years. Talked about it, planned for weeks in advance. This year he passed it up without a blink.

"Got too many other things to think about," said he, okaying a rush defense order.

There's Helen who used to spend hours primping for bridge, cocktail hours, night spots.: Now she's sorting Bundles for Britain and doesn't give a hoot whether the wave's in her hair or not.

It's hitting other things in our lives, also, this new consciousness of a larger, more pressing world. Those old feuds which we've carried through the years . . . the endless little pin-pricks that got our goat . . . the moods that knocked us out of our stride . . . they are losing their grip on us too.

Somehow when you think of the Greeks, or the Finns, or Dunkirk, you wonder why on earth you've been mad at Milly Jones all these years, just because she once said Junior was a hellion.

Even the griefs and humiliations, we can't hug those as we use to do. The loneliness that has gnawed us like a cancer for years. The grave that swallowed all you knew of hope and laughter. That old betrayal that has festered so long in your blood. Once these took precedence over all other interests. Now they're being blotted out by swift, enormous Change.

And one remembers that other tragic blotting out which marked the trail of the pioneers. The hasty camp by night . . . the sudden death . . . a tiny grave that must not be a marker for the Indian or the wolf. And so the rolling wheels went over, one by one, wiping out the little mound . . . the wheels that must go on no matter what happened.

Pitiful? Yes. But merciful, too. Better, infinitely, that the little grave should be left behind than that a mother should spend her life weeping above it. Dear as love was, there were greater responsibilities to face . . . home to make . . . other babes to cherish . . . a wilderness to conquer. Beside these tremendous challenges one could not nurse a single, broken heart.

Rolling wheels—all progress has been built by them. Always before we can go on to a wider life we must leave something behind—something that belonged to a smaller, personal joy. And always the going on hurts—as all growth hurts. But it's better to be hurt than to stay in our little rut forever, never guessing what adventures lie ahead for those who are strong enough to grasp them.

Rolling wheels, thank God for them! Thank God for the stern and overwhelming pressure that wipes out the narrow boundaries of our lives and gives us a wider perspective, even though we glimpse it through tears.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Roosevelt Plane Control Convoy Already at Work Over Atlantic

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Behind all the guessing and speculation over convoys aroused by the president's fireside chat is this one basic fact. The old-fashioned form of convoy already is out-moded, and, as Roosevelt indicated at last week's press conference, it will not be used. But the new-fashioned form of convoy, as described in detail in this column May 1, already is in use and will be intensified.

This is convoy by airplane patrol, using airplane carriers and nearby islands for bases. The destruction of the Bismarck showed how effective this airplane convoy could be.

Airplanes flying above the water can sight the submarine below the water miles away, whereas a surface vessel cannot sight a submarine more than a mile or so away. Therefore you can expect to see a network of United States airplanes criss-crossing back and forth across the north Atlantic, assisted in part by surface warships, but extending all the way to Ireland.

The Pacific Fleet.

With this settled, the most important strategic problem being discussed in backstage Navy circles is that of bringing the mighty Pacific fleet from the ocean into the Atlantic to prevent Nazi seizure of the mid-Atlantic Islands and to be ready for other major eventualities.

Every detail in connection with such a shift has been discussed. And while there have been some hot behind-the-scenes arguments, the one thing upon which the admirals all agree is that the fleet must be kept together. To split it into small units and send some of them to the Atlantic, in their opinion, would be disastrous. Battleships must have their accompanying cruisers, destroyers, etc., and they cannot be divided.

Naturally, the idea of the fleet withdrawing from the Pacific is enough to raise the hair on the heads of most people on the West Coast. However, the Navy has worked out a plan whereby it is confident that the West Coast would be in no real danger.

This plan is extremely important, because it illustrates the new type of warfare made possible by the long distance bomber. Also it gives the key to Roosevelt's convoy plans. Finally it illustrates what the Nazis could do to the United States if the plan were reversed in the Atlantic.

Key to the plan is Hawaii and the Aleutian islands. The admirals are reasonably confident that long distance patrol planes ranging out from Hawaii in the mid-Pacific and from the Aleutians in the north Pacific would be sufficient to spot any Japanese ship approaching American waters. And air torpedoes of the type which crippled the Bismarck could do the rest. In fact, the entire Bismarck incident has been a striking demonstration that long distance bombers plus island bases have revolutionized warfare in both oceans.

Azores and Canaries.

Now if you transpose the map of the Pacific onto the map of the Atlantic, you will also get an idea of why Roosevelt bore down so heavily on the importance of the Azores, the Canary and Cape Verde islands in his fireside chat. For the Azores are the Hawaii of the mid-Atlantic, while the Canaries and Cape Verdes might be compared to the Aleutians—in reverse position.

Whoever holds these stepping-stones across the Atlantic can sweep that ocean with naval patrol planes and bombers, just as the U. S. fleet can sweep the Pacific from Hawaii and the Aleutians.

If we hold these Atlantic islands, then we hold the gateway to the Atlantic. If Hitler holds them, he controls the first step toward Brazil—and the rest of the way is easy. These were some of the things Roosevelt studied on the large-scale maps of the navy department before he made his broadcast.

Another vital point he studied was not mentioned in his broadcast; because no one is talking publicly about the fact that the British may have to withdraw from Gibraltar, even from the Mediterranean altogether. But in case of such a withdrawal, a glance at the map will show that these three sets of islands—the Azores, Canaries and Cape Verdes—could help to replace Gibraltar.

They sit astride the entrance to the Mediterranean, and long range bombing planes based on those islands could make it hot for any expeditionary force heading out of the Mediterranean for the Americas. All of these are reasons why you can expect vital action regarding the Atlantic islands.

Slugger Lewis.

That half-page newspaper ad sponsored by Southern coal operators bitterly denouncing John L. Lewis and charging him with "dictator" ambitions, had an unadvertised sequel.

It occurred several days after the ad appeared at the meeting of operators and miners called by the Defense Mediation Board in another try at reaching an agreement between the warring groups. The conference took place in the spacious OPM council chamber used by the Board for such powwows.

As usual, Lewis made a solo entry after everybody else was seated. With all eyes on him he roared into action.

Eyes flashing with anger, he told the operators that their ad was a personal insult to him; that since they had descended to dealing in personalities he was prepared to settle their differences on that basis.

"I challenge any of you," Lewis declared, "to step outside and fight it out man to man."

There were no takers.

Lewis sat down and the deliberations got under way.

Capital Chaff.

Walter Winchell took a great liking to Senator Capper of Kansas during his recent visit to the Capitol. Capper, himself a successful newspaperman, owner of several papers, is at 75 one of the most active legislators in Washington. . . . Despite the Good Neighbor policy, U. S. insurance firms have declined insurance on Axis ships seized and operated by the Mexican government. Mexico was following the lead of the U. S. A. in taking the Axis vessels, but although the British will insure them, U. S. firms won't. . . . Every year Homer Cummings holds "The Attorney General's Golf Tournament" at Pinehurst, N. C., an event started when he was running the Justice Department. Chief rule is: "If any man brings his wife, he's never invited again." . . . After General Allen Gullion, the Army's efficient Judge Advocate General, appeared in the comic strip "Hap Hopper," he received a letter from an old boyhood chum saying: "I have been wondering where you were for forty years, and now at last I've located you through the funny papers."

Health And Diet

—By DR. CLENDENING

Those of my readers who have followed my column for any length of time are aware of my interest in multiple human births. I feel that in the case of twins we have a unique opportunity to study organisms biologically because in the case of similar (one-egg) twins, we have individuals starting out with exactly the same heredity and the same biological or life impetus.

My records show, indeed, that in spite of varying environments, twins, over and over again, live the same length of time, even to within hours and minutes of each other, and often die of the same diseases.

I am very much interested, therefore, in the recent book by Dr. H. H. Newman, Professor of Zoology at the University of Chicago, on Multiple Human Births. (Doubleday, Doran & Company, Inc., 1940). Dr. Newman has frequently studied twins but this, so far as I know, is the first time that he has branched out into triplets, quadruplets and a study of the famous quints.

Frequency of Multiple Births.

The frequency of multiple births follows a startling mathematical ratio. Triplets are as much scarcer than twins as twins are scarcer than singletons. In other words, a twin birth occurs for each of 86 single births, and one triplet birth occurs for each of 86 twin births, and one quadruplet birth occurs for each 86 triplet births. Stated otherwise, the ratio of twins to single births is 1 to 86, that of triplets to single births is 1 to 86.2, that of quadruplets to single births is 1 to 86.3. This astonishing ratio has been worked out accurately and is known as Hellin's Law.

Two out of 88, or 1 out of 44 babies born are twins, according to these figures. "Does this mean," asks Professor Newman, "that if you were to attend a football game viewed by 44,000 spectators, that 1,000 of them would be twins?" Well, perhaps not quite that, but we should expect about 600 twins in a crowd of that size.

In four California cities — Berkeley, Oakland, Richmond and Alameda—there was a total school enrollment of 75,013. Of these 1,051 were twins.

Sex Ratios.

In multiple births, the zoologist tries to determine whether the individuals came from one egg, or two or three eggs. One-egg twins, triplets or quadruplets are always of the same sex (a brother and sister twin are never one-egg twins) and they are similar in many other respects.

Now, looking at the sex ratios of quadruplets there were 48 sets of quadruplets born in the United states from 1915 to 1930. There could be five, and only five, sex combinations in a quadruplet set: (1) 4 males, (2) 3 males and 1 female, (3) 2 males and 2 females, (4) 3 females and 1 male, and (5) 4 females. As a matter of fact, in the 48 sets, there were 13 all males and 10 all females, 12 two males and two females. This would indicate that nearly half were one-egg quadruplets and a fourth were two-egg quadruplets. Four sets of quintuplets have been born in the United States since 1776—one in 1776, one in 1800, one in 1896 (Maysfield, Ky.—all boys) and one in 1936 (Durham, N. C.—all girls).

Not as much study has been made of the psychology of triplets and quadruplets as of twins, but in the case of one-egg triplets or quadruplets, the similarity in personality, intellect, bodily build and tendency to disease, is just the same as in twins.

A Farmer's Diary

Roadside Tragedy

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

AS I went along the highway, early in the morning, I saw where a wild life tragedy had occurred. At the very edge of the brick, just beside a narrow strip of tender dewy sweet clover, a crow was pecking greedily at a gory carcass. He sank his black, strong beak in deeply and then pulled and twisted on some tasty morsel until the sable feathers of his whole body quivered. He was so absorbed that he made no attempt to fly when I stopped on the berm 30 feet away to observe.

He appeared, at first, to be alone, but something blotted out my view of the victim he was pecking at and occasionally a shadowy movement blurred the line of clover. When my eyes became adjusted, I made out the outline of a pheasant hen, that crept out stealthily from between the clover stalks and worked in modest competition with the crow.

For more than five minutes I watched the feasters. They covered the victim so that I could not determine just what member of the wild folk family had met his fate. The blood that stood in a little pool on the pavement was guarded by the crow and between bites of the mangled flank and shoulder he dipped his beak into the scarlet fluid and drank. The pheasant had no part in this, but only stopped eating to watch.

Then the grass moved above the ditch and the dewy wall of sweet clover parted to show the black, pointed nose and small, wide-eyed face of a little smooth haired dog. He stood as still as stone and watched.

The pheasant saw him, she stopped feasting, ruffled her feathers bravely and cast a savage snake-like look upon the cur, then turned and fiercely but very deliberately moved toward him. The dog didn't wait. He retreated down the bank so rapidly that he lost his balance and rolled into the ditch. Smoothing down her modest feathers the hen pheasant began again where she had left off.

A car came along just then and caused the birds to fly. I drove nearer the prostrate form and found it to be a large mother possum. The whole fore part of her body had been crushed—but what I had not seen before — a foot away, four wounded gray furred little ones writhed and shivered mutely.

Even as I turned away, another automobile came by and flattened them upon the pavement.

Let's Look Around

Los Angeles, a City Transformed

—By G. J. KOCHENDERFER

LOS ANGELES, Calif.—There are probably at least a few people in Los Angeles who do not have automobiles, but a drive along Wiltshire boulevard in early evening gives the impression that all the motor vehicles in the country have suddenly concentrated on this particular thoroughfare.

It is somewhat difficult, from the Ohio viewpoint, to understand Los Angeles as being a great city in its own right, and entirely disassociated from the motion picture industry, for which it has become best known in other parts of the country.

Here in Los Angeles the making of motion pictures is considered incidental, rather than as a dominating phase of the city's industrial life, and it is to airplane factories, automobile assembly plants, citrus fruit marketing and diversified manufacturing that residents are most likely to attribute the growth and apparent stability of their city—not forgetting the highly touted tourist appeal of "all-year climate," which is said to guarantee moderate temperature and absence of rain, except when the weather is quite "unusual."

With a present population of more than a million and a half, representing growth of more than a quarter of a million in the past ten years, Los Angeles spreads out over more territory than any other American city and merges inconspicuously into a dozen or more surrounding municipalities.

Looking down, for instance, from a vantage point on Laurel Canyon Drive into the rich San Fernando valley, a dozen separate towns are visioned, all seeming to be a part of one large community with richly productive agricultural surroundings.

EARLY settlers in Los Angeles—those who prospered and became wealthy long before a great city grew up around them, are somewhat inclined to resent the metropolitan encroachment, and many of the fine old homes on West Adams boulevard, the elite district of small city days, are trying rather despairingly to maintain the dignity and charm of a past era while more recently developed suburban sections provide the settings for elaborate new homes.

A STAY of several days in Los Angeles, under capable guidance, is essential to even a casual glimpse of the many places of interest in this city and vicinity, and we are so fortunate as to have for a guide a former Mansfielder, Edward B. Cappeller, who was owner of the Mansfield News until 20 years ago, since which he has lived in Los Angeles.

Our first day's look-around gave a general view of the city and opportunity to become acquainted with carefully observed driving regulations, and also included close-up inspection of the famous Hollywood Bowl, a natural open-air ampitheater, with an enclosure of hills which provide exceptional acoustics for the fine symphony orchestra entertainment given several evenings each week during the summer months. This great "bowl," with its seating capacity of more than 20,000, was started 18 years ago and represents the successful development of an idea of one woman who visioned the possibility of using these hillsides as the background of an amphitheater in which fine music could be made available at popular prices. A sunrise service each Easter morning is a feature which crowds Hollywood Bowl, a natural open-air ampitheater, with an nearby hills.

MORE was seen on this first day, but the space limit has been reached—so that's all, for now.

The Secret of the Marshbanks + + +

By Kathleen Norris

(Copyright, 1941)

CHAPTER IV.

Judge Marshbanks' visitor, twisting a little to look at Cherry, acknowledged the introduction only with a nod and with a level, curious half-smile, and went on talking in a low tone.

"You're not going to this jamboree tonight, Jud?" he said.

"Good heavens, no! But I may pick the girls up there if we play late enough. I'm going to the club. I ought to look in at the Randall party, I suppose. You dressing later?"

"Oh, I don't think I'll go at all! I think I'll go home," the visitor observed. "But, of course, I had to see what our deb looked like tonight. Isn't this the first big affair for her?"

"She was down here a few minutes ago, sure that she was going to look awful and that something was growing on the tip of her nose," the older man said in tolerant amusement. "She's dining at the Rogerses' in Burlingame, going down with Fern, and will come back to the party,"

"Dining?" said Kelly Coates, flinging up his wrist to see the time. "What time do these dublets dine? It's eight now."

"The dinner is supposed to be at eight—seventeen miles away," Judge Marshbanks said. "But they have to kill time until midnight, so they're not worrying! Fran dining down there too, and she'll play bridge until it's time to go to the party."

They talked on of places and personalities unknown to Cherry, and Cherry had a chance, over a foamy soffle of chocolate and creamy stripes, to study the new comer. The judge was tall and lean; Kelly Coates was rather more squarely built, with big, hard, nervous hands, fair hair combed back from his square, fine face, keen eyes and a mouth that Cherry found a certain fascination in watching.

It was not that it was handsome, as the judge's fine clipped mouth and restrained rare smiles were. Kelly's was a wide, hard mouth packed with big, hard, shining teeth, and he used his mouth forcefully, now pressing it firmly closed in denial, now splitting his browned, square face with a great flashing smile, now widening his thinned lips together into an expression of scorn that matched his quickly folded arms and tossed head.

To her he seemed old, but not as old, certainly, as the judge. Thirty, perhaps. She learned from what she could not help over-hearing that he was an artist, that he lived in some place across the bay called Sausalito.

Two women came downstairs. One was a girl of Cherry's age, as fresh as a spray of acacia bloom in a fluffy frock of palest yellow, with spidery yellow orchids pinned at her shoulder. An innocent-eyed girl, with a lovely heart-shaped little face framed in soft curls, a delicately poised little body and discontented blue eyes.

The other woman was dark too, but of an entirely different type. Cherry's first impression was that she was ugly. She was tall and thin, with a long face, deep-set dark eyes, and silky straight black hair that was cut in a deep bang. Her skin was clear and pale, her lips startling in contrast, for her mouth—wide, soft and full—was colored the flame red of a poppy. A tight, black velvet gown outlined her body, the lowcut waist fitted by many seams. Long diamond earrings dangled almost to her shoulders, and at her breast a circle clip of diamonds blazed in the dining room's half light.

"Skunks," she said simply. Her voice, hoarse and deep, thrilled suddenly in the silence. Both men were on their feet as she came languidly to the table. "Of course you both know you're polecats!" she said

The girl, after having said, "Sam's here, he won't come in," had vanished back in the direction of the hall again. Judson Marshbanks introduced Cherry to his wife, who acknowledged the little ceremony only with an absent glance in Cherry's direction.

"You let me do all the dirty work," said Fran Marshbanks, in a lazily annoyed tone And again her voice shocked Cherry with its very beauty, it was a rich, low voice that seemed always about to be broken with laughter or tears or both, a shattering, trembling voice that yet clearly indicated its owner's boredom and indifference and pride.

Jud, you are running out on this party," he wife accused him.

"Well, my dear, a debutante party—" he pleaded.

"I know. But you owe it to Amy." But she did not care very much, either way. "As for Mr. Coates," she went on, carelessly reproaeful; "he is apparently entirely without soul; he ought to be cultivating rich, homely girls who want their portraits painted, and here is an occasion when he could meet, not one of them, but all of them! Not even dressed!"

"My dress clothers are circa President Harrison, Mrs. Marshbanks," the painter said. "If I painted anyone it would be yourself, and you say you won't sit for me."

"Because I won't go to Sausalito and dress in a transformed barn," Fran answered composedly.

"You've never seen it," he said.

"I know it's like that. Besides, I'm just bringing Amy out in society," the woman went on, "and I have maternal obligations."

"Maternal! You! What is she to you? Sister-in-law?"

"I wish Jud's mother were here to hear you! Family intricacies are meat and drink to her," Fran said. "She's getting back from Florida this week, by the way; you might come in for a cocktail and meet her. She'd be a subject for you! No," she added, reverting to the original topic, "Amy's not my sister-in-law. She's my—work that out, Jud. What's Amy to me?"

"She's my brother's child," he elucidated. "She's my niece, and that makes her your niece by marriage."

"That makes her my niece by marriage," Fran repeated, turning the slow battery of her dark eyes upon Kelly. Cherry saw the look and it made her feel oddly hot and then cold. There was flame in it and challenge in it and provacation, and though the girl could not have given these things names, she knew what they were and what they meant.

"I'll have to come here and paint you at the house," Kelly said in an odd voice after a moment.

"Ah, well, if you could do that!"

"I don't see that we're such criminals, Jud and I," said Kelly, "you've two perfectly good escorts, out there in the hall. I don't dance; I drink very little; I hardly know these people—Why on earth should I go?"

"To be with me," Fran suggested, with an oblique glance at her husband and the hint of an unwilling smile.

"You'll be dancing or playing bridge."

"I'll be bored. I know that. I'd much rather stay at home and read Coventry Patmore. But for one thing," Fran said confidentially to the painter, somewhat lowering her tone as the judge went away to answer a telephone call, "I do it for Amy. After being so much abroad with Jud's mother, spending winters in Palm Springs and New York, she's out of everything. We have to give her some sort of party next month. I want to refresh my mind as to how it's done. It isn't my sort of thing at all!"

"I know it isn't," he said, his keen gaze fixed on her.

"You don't really know me at all," her fine, nervous ivory fingers were busy with the delicate lace of her handkerchief. "You've seen me—three times, is it?"

"Dante saw Beatrice once," he said.

"It's so pleasant," said the woman, "to talk to a man who doesn't think Dante's a hospital and who pronounces Beatrice properly."

"I shall hope as our friendship ripens into real affection," Kelly said with a little inclination of his head, "to please you in more important ways."

"Our friendship is going to ripen? How nice!"

"Don't be too sure it will be nice. It may be—distinctly unpleasant!" he warned her lightly.

She looked at him through half-closed lids at this, in a silence so long that Cherry, fussing with cheese and coffee, could feel her own heart beating quickly.

"You interest me," Fran presently said quietly.

"I can't think at the moment of anything I'd rather do," he answered in the same deliberate, half-serious fashion.

MYERS-PEALER VOWS SOLEMNIZED SUNDAY

First Lutheran Church Scene of Formal Open Church Service for Miss Betty Myers and Jack Pealer Sunday at 2:30 O'clock.

THE First Lutheran church was decorated with palms, ferns and two seven-branch candelabra, with two beauty baskets filled with assorted pastel flowers, as a background for the wedding ceremony uniting in marriage Miss Mary Elizabeth Myers and Jack Remy Pealer. The single ring service was read Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock before the altar of the church by Rev. Grover E. Swoyer. Friends and relatives attended the open church ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, Earl Myers, the bride approached the altar in a formal wedding gown of sugar mist in white. The long tight bodice was appliqued in a floral trim of satin extending down the front of the bodice and down the back. A sweetheart neckline and long full sleeves fashioned the gown which had a full skirt with a long train. Her double caped veil was attached to a beaded juliet headpiece and worn virgin style. She carried an arm bouquet of white roses, swansonia and white larkspur.

Mrs. Russell Doehla was matron of honor for Miss Myers and wore a heaven blue marquisette and lace gown made shirtwaist style with high neckline and long full sleeves. The skirt of dirndl style was attached to the tight midrift and at the neck were tiny velvet bows. With this she wore a quaint shirred bonnet in the same shade as the dress. Her bouquet was of light blue delphinium, pink roses and pink larkspur.

Little Suzanne Staman of Lakewood, a cousin of the bride, was flower girl, wearing a simple pink and white frock. Her basket was filled with pink, blue and white flowers.

Mrs. Earl Myers, mother of the bride, was attired in a rose sheer frock with navy accessories and her corsage was of gardenias. Mrs. Pealer wore navy blue frock with white trim with navy accessories. Her corsage was of gardenias.

As the bridal party prepared for the ceremony, nuptial music was played by Mrs. Clayson D. Bell, whose selections were "Orange Blossoms" by MacMaster, "Liebstraum" by Liszt, "Sweetest Story Ever Told" by Stults, "I Love You Truly" by Bond, "Traumerie" by Schuman, "Prelude" by Chopin, "O Promise Me" by De Koven, "Dreams" by Wagner and "Ave Maria" by Schubert. During the ceremony Mrs. Bell played "Through the Years" by Youmans and "O Perfect Love" by Barnly.

Ushers for the service were John Harrison, Frank Mengert, Russell Doehla and Robert Brollier, all of Mansfield William Wappner served as best man for Mr. Pealer.

Following the wedding a reception was held at the Susie Janis home, Park avenue west road, with 30 in attendance. Refreshments were served with appointments in keeping with the wedding color scheme. Later in the day the couple left for a southern motor trip after which they will make their home at 151 Arthur avenue. For traveling the bride wore a rose dress with matching wool jacket and hat, brown and white accessories, and a corsage of gardenias.

Mrs. Pealer was graduated from the Mansfield high school, the Mansfield Business Training school and is a member of the Delta chapter, Gamma Gamma Gamma sorority. She has been employed at the Ohio Brass company. Mr. Pealer, a graduate of Mansfield high school, is employed at the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Myers, 151 Arthur avenue, and Mr. Pealer is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ira L. Pealer, 339 Altamont avenue.

Out-of-town guests in attendance for the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. D. K. Staman, Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Staman and Suzanne Staman, all of Lakewood, and Robert Matthes of Dearborn, Mich.

Unmasked Love Held In Much Disdain

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Here's an extract from a letter written by a distracted girl who doesn't understand why her boy friend hangs up the telephone receiver when he recognizes her voice. She finds it hard to believe that he's sick and tired of her cloying devotion!

"I seem to have lost all my pride where he is concerned. I thought he cared very much for me, but now he seems to turn away. When I call him up, he cuts the conversation short and hangs up. My friends have told me he speaks of me as a 'telephone hound.' I could understand it, if I ever did anything mean to him, but I have always given him only my deepest love."

She has never heard, poor girl, the old adage that if a girl throws herself at a man's head, she's likely to find her self at his feet. Men who are unremittingly sought after when they are plainly bored by the attentions paid them have the feeling of hunted creatures, and a hunted thing fights desperately to escape.

"Deepest love" such as this girl says she has always given her young man, palls if you make a steady diet of it. The cheap, salted peanut never tastes so good as when you've worked your way through a large box of "somebody's best" candy.

My correspondent didn't want me to give all of her letter, fearing it would be recognized, but I don't believe I'll be breaking faith if I say that "petting" and handholding appear to have been the specialties of this affair, from first to last. Indeed, I'm afraid there was very little else. So the young man became tired of the too-easy kisses and now hangs up the receiver when he recognizes his girl's voice on the phone.

It's strange, but that cruel insult doesn't seem to cure her of her infatuation, and she writes me a long letter to ask how she can win him back.

Alas, there's no magic formula for winning them back. But there is a magic formula that may be invoked for keeping them, and that is: 'Don't be cheap. Bargains in affection, like bargains on the marked-down counter, are open to suspicion. What is worth while is harder to get.

I know that manners, customs, even morals, have changed in the last generation; but there is something innate in human nature that turns from what is cheap and easy to the thing that is more difficult to acquire.

Think this over, all you girls who let men break dates without explanation or apology; who ring up your boy friends on the telephone day in and day out, and then want to know how you can "win him back." It just can't be done!

If you allow yourself to be "picked up," taken for motor rides by strange young men, or crash an acquaintance without an introduction, don't be surprised if the young man drops you and gets tired of his "bargain counter" playmate. It's a case of "easy-come, easy-go," so there's no use crying about it.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"The bedroom," I murmured beneath my breath as Philip came back to us, for a glimmering of his plan had come to me, as well as the embryo of a scheme of my own.

He caught my cue instantly.

"It's still drafty," he said loudly. "What about your bedroom windows? May I investigate?"

"Of course," I assented, and he strode into the bedroom, returning in a few seconds with an air as of a duty done.

"I closed the curtains in there, too," he said. "It will help temporarily, anyway."

A knock upon the door furnished the period for his sentence, and when he opened it the manager of the hotel, debonair and exquisitely groomed as ever, came past him into the room, bowing low to Olga and to me.

"I am so sorry to think you have been inconvenienced," he began, but the Lansfield's owner cut him short.

Vertizen Explains.

"Everything is all right," he said brusquely, but in low tones. "That was simply a ruse to get you up here."

There evidently was no answer to this, and Mr. Milner made none, beyond a faint interrogatory "Yes?"

"I haven't time to explain things to you," Mr. Veritzen went on.

"I need no explanation but your wishes," the manager returned smoothly, and I could not tell whether his employer was gratified or bored at the assurance. At any rate he ignored the interpolated tribute, speaking with brisk authority.

"Here's the problem," he said. "Mrs. Graham may find it necessary to occupy another room temporarily, yet keeping this one on. What I want to know of you is this: Has this suite ever had any connection with any other room, a connection which could be renewed now, so that she could go into this other room without going out into the hall?"

Shows Secret Keyhole.

"Queer you should ask that just now," Mr. Milner returned. "We are planning alterations to begin almost immediately. But, in the meantime—if you'll just come into the bedroom with me a second—"

He was speaking to Philip Veritzen, but his glance included Olga and me, and his employer was quick to include us.

"Will you come with us?" he asked deferentially, and Olga's assent was as ready as mine.

We followed the two men into the bedroom, panelled, as was the living room, with alternating wood and stucco. Each wooden panel was outlined with strips of rounded wooden molding.

Mr. Milner went up to one of them, looking exactly like any of the others, and moved a small section of the wood to one side, revealing a keyhole.

Philip Veritzen bent and scrutinized it. Then he turned to the manager.

"Practicable?" he asked.

"Oh, yes," Mr. Milner replied. "Unfortunately, however, the keys are downstairs. They are never used unless we have a call for several rooms thrown together, which does not happen often. And, as I said, we are planning to make this door into a panel that really is closed."

Other Room Is Vacant.

His employer nodded his understanding of the situation.

"Is the room on the other side occupied?" he asked.

"That I cannot tell until I have consulted the room clerk," Mr. Milner said. "May I use your telephone?"

He looked at me with the courtly deference which is a part of his job, and I nodded.

"Of course," I said, and Mr. Veritzen swiftly interpolated the amendment which was on my lips.

"But you must keep your voice very low," he said. "I will explain later."

"I will be careful," Mr. Milner said, and forthwith went to the telephone, put a question to the room clerk, and a few seconds later turned to us with the answer.

"That room is vacant," he said.

HOROSCOPE

For Tuesday, June 2.

A day notable for the renewed life and activity in old crystallized or static conditions, which may respond to new techniques, modernized methods or just plain push and hard work. Elders and superiors as well as long-established institutions may cooperate in such a fresh start, or assist in relation to stagnant investments or securities. But there is need of sagacity, astuteness, as well as suspicion, as both business and private affairs are in danger from intrigue, snares and treachery.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of definite progress in resurrecting old static and congested conditions by infusing new methods, sound systems, keen insight as to details, with dogged determination and industry as well as by the sturdy help of old institutions, employers or elders. However, in all associations there should be a suspicious eye toward intrigues, trickery or duplicity. Under the beneficent sway there should be enhanced values in property and solid investments. Fidelity and merit should attain proper rewards.

A child born on this day should be persistent, steady, responsible and hard working, with sound views and system. It may however suffer fraud or deception from sources least suspected.

Tomorrow's Problem.

If West leads the heart J, how should South plan his play of this deal at 6-Spades?

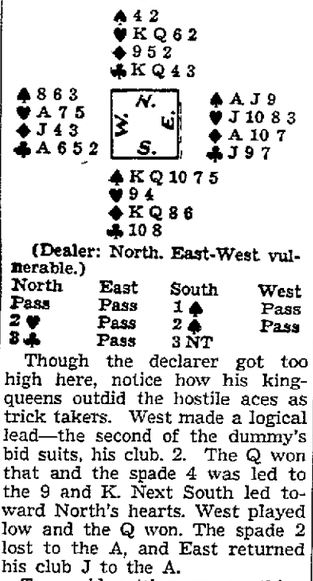
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

VALUES NOT EQUAL

Practically every counting method devised for general use in figuring out both suit and No Trump bids shows an ace as equal in value to the king-queen of a suit. No extra value is added if there is an extra card or cards in the suit, whereas that actually makes the combination appreciably more worth having. If you are able to lead twice toward the guarded combination, you can frequently promote two tricks with it when the ace has to play first.



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♥	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	3 NT

Though the declarer got too high here, notice how his king-queens outdid the hostile aces as trick takers. West made a logical lead—the second of the dummy's bid suits, his club. 2. The Q won that and the spade 4 was led to the 9 and K. Next South led toward North's hearts. West played low and the Q won. The spade 2 lost to the A, and East returned his club J to the A.

To avoid setting up anything else for the declarer and also build a trick for himself, West repeated clubs, his 6 to the K. Now the diamond combination was led toward East, East playing low and the K winning, followed by three spades, West discarding a card from each red suit. When a heart was then offered, West won with his A, cashed his set-up club 5 and finished with a diamond toward his partner's A.

This hand swung so closely that game depended on the fact that West's club 5 was higher than the dummy's 4. Otherwise the four king-queens would have made a game against the four aces. The declarer took six tricks with his combinations as against only four for the opponents with their aces.

"VENDOL" GAVE AMAZING RESULT

"When I'm constipated I suffer terribly from symptoms of acid indigestion like belching up a hot, acid liquid, often containing bits of undigested food, and such quantities of gas in my stomach that I have palpitation, shortness of breath, 'heartburn,' and the bloating makes me uncomfortable for hours after meals, due to constipation, which seems to cause all my troubles," says Mrs. A. A. Graham of 821 Edward street, Galion, Ohio.

"Hearing what a fine medicine Vendol is, I got some and a box of Vendol laxative tablets, and that was the first step back towards better health for me.

"Vendol gives the grandest temporary relief from constipation anyone could want, and when I'm not constipated I never have any of those terrifying symptoms like acid risings, palpitation, gas, bloating, or headaches, due to constipation. My advice to those who suffer this way is to lose no time in trying Vendol."

ANNOUNCING SATURDAY NIGHT CLOSING

Decision of a majority of Mansfield stores to close Saturday evenings at 6 o'clock is a natural one. Operation and employment trends in all lines have for many years been in the direction of shorter work weeks and longer week-end holidays. Saturday night trade has been influenced by these trends and now it becomes possible to adopt the Saturday Night closing practice of most Ohio cities in Mansfield for at least the summer months.

Closing will permit store employes to be with their families and in their homes Saturday evenings.

The Saturday Night closing will have its advantages for customers of Mansfield Stores. Lessening the working hours on Saturdays will permit full operation on the other business days of the week. There will be no summertime half-holidays and regular business hours of 9 A. M. to 5:30 P. M. will prevail daily. Saturdays until 6 P. M.

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

The boys really fixed me up in this column yesterday, didn't they? I mean Don Lindsay, the old Lorain larruper of the sportive typewriter, and Ken Woodman, the warblin' thrush of Napoleon, O. Fixed me up in great shape, they did. I didn't mind so much the fact that Lindsay reminded one and all that he and I both are old timers in this sport racket.

But I never suspected he'd be two-timer enough to tell you about my sad experience as contributor to Eddie Brietz' column with a bit of a ditty on the woes of umpires, signed "Red" Hess.

That little episode I would have been very happy indeed to forget all about.

And that Woodman! You'd never suspect, would you, what a guy is thinking about until he sits down to write a piece for the paper news.

Yes sir, I never knew until yesterday morning that Woodman's big ambition in life was to give the old podger a boot in the seat of the pants.

Warbler, hear my bleat,
Woodman, spare that seat.

But it was all in fun, so I understand, and I can take a boot now and then so long as it's in fun. This column has been something of a monument to fun, and fun I can take.

But if the guy should boot and mean it, that would irk me more than somewhat. And that you would understand if you'd ever noticed the size of the Woodman booters. Bombshells on the hoof, no less.

* * *

The boys did a great job of backing up the podger when this conductor was too ill to back up to a typewriter, ill with an attack of pleurisy that's left me an old man even today. So I wish to thank 'em both, boots and all.

Indians Drop to Second

Humiliated Twice By Wobbly Yank Hurlers.

CLEVELAND — (AP) — Woe is Cleveland!

With their pitchers and batters in a slump, the once-proud Indians today rested in second place as a result of dropping a second consecutive doubleheader.

To add to the humiliation, the usually-wobbly New York pitching staff gave the Redskins only three runs in administering the double dose, 2 to 0 and 5 to 3.

These facts were enough to sadden 52,081 fans as they filed out of Cleveland Stadium yesterday, but today the followers received more bad news. Lou Boudreau, the team's sparkplug shortstop, twisted his knee sliding in the second game and may be out of action for several days. He finished the contest, but his leg began swelling in the clubhouse.

The only cloud with a silver lining bore the image of Bob Feller, the blazin' fast baller who goes after his 11th victory of the year in the finale of the Yankee series. The New Yorkers, now pressing Cleveland for second and only a game and a half behind the pacesetting White Sox, summoned Marius Russo to the mound.

Here's the brief story of the two setbacks that pushed the Indians off the top spot for the first time in more than a month:

Red Ruffing limited Cleveland to eight well-scattered singles and didn't issue a pass in registering a shut out. Al Milnar gave up seven hits and walked five in eight innings, with Joe Heving pitching a hitless ninth. It was the big southpaw's fifth defeat against six decisions.

* * *

New York battered Mel Harder for four runs in the eighth inning to hand him his second setback of the year compared to four triumphs. Singles by Crosetti and Red Rolfe and home runs by Johnny Sturm and George Selkirk did the business. The Yanks had scored a run in the fifth on a walk to Tommy Henrich and Joe Gordon's double.

Ken Keltner smashed a home run in the first and for the next seven innings Lefty Gomez gave Cleveland only three hits.

Miss Secretary, when you finish figuring out how the top of both big leagues got so scrambled during the week-end, please take a letter to Mr. James Joseph Dykes, care of the Chicago White Sox, first place, American baseball league:

"Dear Jimmy: We see by the papers you're right up there at the head of the parade today. Nice going, pal. But you better give those old legs of yours a shot in the arm and come back to work. That is, if you want that American League pennant, you'd better come off that retired list and try to put a cork in your infield.

"You split with the Senators yesterday, blowing the first, 3-2, and taking the nightcap, 4-3, in 11 innings. Except for some extra-special stuff by those fancy Dans in your infield, you might have won both ends to really take a toe-hold on first place, instead of barely getting a grip on a one-percentage point edge.

"Now, Jimmy, it doesn't look like the Indians, who got kicked around twice yesterday by the Yankees, are much interested in that pennant any more.

"Why even your old boss, Connie Mack, has his Athletics so hopped up they've won 13 out of 16, including two from the befuddled Brownies yesterday, and are leading the second division. You know that rarefied air isn't good for them. So it looks like anybody's 'bingo' in your league this year, and you can do it as well as the next guy."

Having disposed of that business, we can turn our undivided attention to the celebration over on the banks of the Gowanus in Brooklyn. The Dodgers nipped the collapsing Cardinals, 3-2, yesterday to climb into a first place tie with St. Louis in the National League.

The Boston Red Sox moved into fourth place and dropped Detroit all the way to sixth by trouncing the Tigers twice. Jimmy Foxx' two-run homer went a long way toward winning the opener, 7-6. A run in the ninth decided the free-for-all nightcap, 6-5. The amazing Athletics turned in 5-2 and 5-3 victories over the Browns behind steady hurling by Bump Hadley and Phil Marchildon.

The 400th homer of Mel Ott's 17-year career led the New York Giants to a 3-2 win over the Cincinnati Reds in the first game of their double bill, but Junior Thompson's eight-hit flinging gave the Rhinelanders the after-piece by an identical score.

The Chicago Cubs bombarded the Phillies, 9-5 in their opener, and then took the nightcap, 1-0, as Jake Mooty won out over Lefty Lee Grissom in a heart-breaker pitching duel. This boosted the Cubs into fourth place over the Reds. The Pirates and Braves were rained out.

REWARDED

FRANKLIN, Pa. —(INS)— Fifteen-year-old Frank Scriven did a good turn for himself and a cat. Dropping from a bridge to an island in French creek to rescue a stranded cat, Scriven had to be rescued by the fire department. An appreciative woman, hearing the story, sent the youth $5.

PERRY AND BUDGE RULE COURT WORLD

CHICAGO —(U.P.)— Fred Perry and Don Budge ruled the nation's tournament professionals again today.

The former British Davis cup star succeeded Budge as singles champion by defeating Dick Skeen of Hollywood at the Chicago Town and Tennis club yesterday, 6-4, 6-8, 6-2, 6-3. Perry and Budge then won the doubles crown for the second straight year, crushing Keith Gledhill, Del Monte, Calif., and Lester Stoefen, Los Angeles, 6-4, 6-4, 6-3.

Staggered Season Urged

Sportsmen Vote For Game Preservation.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Mounting sentiment for restoration of the "staggered" hunting season was indicated today in initial returns on questionnaires distributed to some 25,000 Ohio sportsmen by the state conservation and natural resources division.

Central Ohio showed the greatest trend toward the experimental system under which, in 1939, pheasant season was extended to three weeks with shooting four days a week, rather than two six-day weeks.

The system was abandoned last year principally upon insistence of farmers in the Northwestern Ohio pheasant territory, who contended that three weeks of shooting would be injurious to late crops.

Most replies indicated a strong desire for retention of present seasons and bag limits. The reports will be considered by the conservation and natural resources commission at a public hearing June 10, and the following day hunting seasons and bag limits for the year are to be fixed.

A squint at the questionnaires showed a wide range of sentiment regarding pheasants, rabbits and squirrels—principal objectives of most Ohio nimrods.

Some suggested that the pheasant season, limited last year to Nov. 15-30, inclusive, be extended to Nov. 15-Jan. 1; while others proposed that the former daily bag limit of two cock birds be boosted to two cocks and two hens daily.

* * *

Dozens suggested that there be no open season on squirrels, while others suggested that the daily bag limit be boosted from four to six.

* * *

Rabbits, generally, fared most poorly. Scores of sportsmen advocated that they be placed on the open list all year 'round, while others recommended that no bag limit be put on the bunnies. Last year they were available four-a-day from Nov. 15, through Jan. 1.

Providents Boot Apple Around

Mansfield Provident Loans treated themselves to an off-day in the field yesterday committing eight errors as they bowed to the Columbus J. & K. Shoes 7 to 1.

The usually reliable second base combination of Jean Herrick and Bucky Holda contributed six of the bobbles, dividing them evenly.

* * *

The Providents attempt to get back on the winning path Thursday evening at 6:15 when they meet the Ashland Provident Loans.

Lucas Trounces Plymouth Nine

Lucas sluggers fattened their batting averages yesterday as they hammered out a 16 to 4 decision over Plymouth at Lucas.

Bob Greulich collected three singles and a double and Diehl crashed through with a home run, a triple and two singles to lead the attack.

J. Oswalt fanned 10 Plymouth batters, walked only two, and joined in the assault on Hurler Nesbitt of Plymouth with a triple and double.

NOT SAME SENIOR TOURNEY AS OURS

The State Seniors championship scheduled for Scioto Country club, Columbus, June 5, is not to be confused with the Ohio Senior Golf association tournament held annually at Westbrook.

However, Jock Collins, Westbrook pro, said today that he feared the recent fire which destroyed the Mansfield clubhouse Wednesday night, might result in the transfer of the Ohio senior tournament, although he has had no official word on the matter.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — A five-day, 17-race program with total purses of $14,000 has been carded for the trotter and pacers appearing at Ohio State's fair, Aug. 23 to 29.

Purses range from $500 for each of nine overnight events, to $2,000 for the 2:15 Ohio pacing derby. In addition, a trophy will be awarded each winner, Fair Manager Win H. Kinnan said in announcing that Ohio is the only state giving trophies to the winners of all races.

The eight closed events attracted more than 300 horses, a new record for the state fair, and those entrants will fight it out for six purses of $1,000, one for $1,500 and another for $2,000.

A one per cent entry fee, the lowest in the country, is charged for the overnight races, and the half-mile track is reported in the best of condition.

Steve G. Phillips of Xenia will be the starter, and racing will begin Aug. 25 and close Aug. 29. All events will be on the three-heat plan, and here's the program:

Aug. 25: 2:13 pace and 2:24 trot for $500 each; 2:15 trot (closed) for $1,000.

Aug. 26: 2:17 pace and 2:22 trot for $500 each; two-year-old pace (closed) for $1,000.

Aug. 27: 2:14 trot for $500; two-year-old trot (director of agriculture stake, closed) for $1,000: 2:15 pace (the Ohio pacing derby, closed) for $2,000; and the 2:20 pace (closed) for $1,000.

Aug. 28: 2:10 trot for $500; three-year-old trot (governor's stake, closed) for $1,500; three-year-old pace and 2:20 trot (both closed) for $1,000 each.

Aug. 29: 2:21 pace, 2:18 trot and free-for-all pace, for $500 each.

In event any class race is unfilled, a classified race will be substituted, made up of horses on the grounds ready to start.

Ed Mutryn Climbs Fast

Brave Makes Habit of Playing With Champs.

The City of Cleveland has one of the best amateur baseball organizations in the country, with graded leagues in which beginners may start and work their way up, just as they do in professional ball.

Catcher Eddie Mutryn of the Mansfield Braves is a graduate of that system. Starting at the Bottom, he showed enough to move up each year, and when there were no more worlds to conquer in the amateur field, he started out this year as a pro with the Braves.

A handful of ball games don't make a season, and it's a long way to the end of the Ohio State loop schedule, but a better start than Eddie has made could not be asked of any rookie.

After two years of high school baseball, young Mutryn joined a club in Class E of the Cleveland Baseball association. He clicked his first year and moved up a notch every season.

In 1939, when he had reached the Class B circuit, his team was short on outfielders and Eddie was pressed into service in the garden. He patrolled the field most of the summer and came up with a batting average of .350.

Last year, in Class A, he hit .325 and led the league in home runs and triples. There were two sets of brothers on the club, all hitting well over the .300 line. Eddie went back to his favorite spot behind the plate, while his brother, Chet, held down one of the team's outfield posts.

Practically every year in the Cleveland organizations, Mutryn was with a flag winner or runner-up, and the Braves will have to stay up in the Ohio State race if they want him to feel at home.

Of Polish parentage, Eddie will not be 19 years old until Dec. 7. He stands five feet, 11 inches and weighs 205 pounds. If he keeps up his early season hitting, the Braves may crave more Mutryn punch in the batting order and put in a call for Brother Chet, who also had a good stick record in the Cleveland ranks.

Brewers Split With Kansas City

(By Associated Press)

The tail-end Milwaukee Brewers concluded their home stay Sunday with an even break with American Association leading Kansas City. Johnny Schmitz held the Blues safely in the first tilt for a 9 to 5 win after the Brewers had built up a 5-0 lead. In the aftermath, Ruger Ardizoia beat the Brewers 5 to 1, on two hits, one a home run by Joe Abreu.

Minneapolis dropped a half game back of the Blues by losing a 6 to 5, 11-inning decision to St. Paul.

Louisville and Indianapolis swapped shutout victories. Ray Starr pitched the Indians to a 2 to 0, four-hit triumph and then Owen Sheetz retaliated with a 3 to 0, five-hit shutout for the Colonels.

Toledo, although getting only three hits, defeated Columbus, 3 to 2, in their nightcap after the Redbirds had taken the opener, 4 to 1.

Braves Lose at Tiffin

Bad First Inning Costs Game For Mansfield.

Mansfield Braves spotted the Tiffin Mud Hens to a six-run lead in the first inning yesterday at Tiffin, and that was the winning margin as the Hens coasted to a 9 to 3 Ohio State league victory.

* * *

Rudy Okleson was the victim of the first frame fiasco as he gave up three walks and contributed a wild pitch and was nicked for one hit.

* * *

Tony Drewek was called in to retire the side, but Tony was forced to retire himself in the fourth inning when he was hit by a line drive.

Coleman hurled good ball the rest of the way, allowing only two runs.

Seven errors didn't help the Mansfield cause, but they were already out of the ball game as Hurler Franz limited the Braves to four hits.

Mansfield meets Tiffin here tonight, and plays Lima tomorrow night at the Fairground before a ladies' night crowd.

GALION PUPILS HEAR ADDRESS

Rev. Philip Auer Gives Sermon at Baccalaureate Services Sunday Evening.

GALION—"Building the House of Life," was the subject of a sermon when Rev. Philip E. Auer, pastor of Peace Lutheran church, presided for the annual baccalaureate services of the graduating class of 1941, Sunday evening in the high school auditorium.

Stressing the points to be considered in the "blue prints" for building, Rev. Auer began by stating that the house of life should not be spared of good material, inasmuch as it is being built for eternity and not just for a time.

"Beginning with the foundation, three points are to be considered in building," Rev. Auer said.

He told his listeners they should sink deeply the foundation of faith —faith in self; faith in others; and most important—faith in God; realizing that the time will come when one's house must pass God's inspection.

"Second in the "blue print" plans should be the strong walls, built upon courage—that they may rest upon the foundation of faith in God to withstand the "strong winds" of life, he added.

"Third specification," he said, "is to furnish the rooms for service—not for getting, but for giving." He told of the various fields of life in which service should be placed above dollars and cents.

Final recommendation for "building the house of life," was that the roof that would point skyward for a regular communion with God.

MIXED PRICES RULE DEALINGS ON MART TODAY

Stocks Continue Sluggish In Face of Crete Defeat, Priorities Signing.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Narrowly mixed price changes ruled in today's stock market while dealings continued sluggish.

The British defeat at Crete, brokers said, had been pretty well discounted marketwise but many potential share purchasers inclined to hold aloof pending the next war move.

Signing of the mandatory priorities bill by the president and further price "ceilings" set by defense authorities were thought to have provided additional speculative question marks.

Financial offers scanned the survey of the magazine "Steel" which said that "business as usual, with complete supplying of all peace-time steel needs, apparently now seems impossible, even to the die-hards."
